RICHARD BENNETT SEEN IN "AND THE LAW SAYS"

A powerful headliner at the Strand for the first three days of this week is the Mutual five reel film, "And the Law Says." The story deals with that old question, the death penalty and the stern judge, who helicros in the stern judge who believes in the strictest administration of the law as many stigmas and trials that crowd the lives of children left, for the greater part, parentless by the divorce courts. It is a very appealing story and well acted.

Sid Lewis, as an irresistible "nut" direct from the factory, and "The Surprise Party," a musical act complete with lots of humor, proved very acceptable to yesterday's audiences. Krane and White ably entertained with card tricks and selections on the piano. Eugene LeBlanc is a neat stricks administration of the law as strictest administration of the law as it is in his hands to deal it. Richard Bennett, the dramatic film actor, is the principal who is charged with murder and sentenced to death in the electric chair by the judge, who finds out only when it is too late that it is his own son that he has condemned to death. The twelfth episode of the Scarlet Runner provides its usual thrills, and the L-Ko comedy, "Up the Flue," and Mutual Weekly complete a very fine
