Since The World began this discussion The Conservative Standard, published in the old Town of Kingston, has taken quite an intgrest in our program. It has been claiming day after day that the program so far as announced did not amount to much, that it had sprung from the orain of W. F. maclean, who was somewhat erratic, somewhat eccentric and at all events was only W. F Maclean at best. Now when The Standard finds that The World resents the efforts of the Nationalists and others'in Quebec to press the war policy up to the hilt, and, as The Standard has probably gone further in this direction than anyone else, it has changed its mind. But it still says that the way to do it is not to create a new party, bu to create a new issue, and that issue is a say that the situation is more than line-up against the whole of the Province of Quebec, according to The Standard And The Standard goes on to argue that the Conservatives under Sir Robert Borden is the party to make that issue. On what ground does The Standard make that claim? Surely it knows all about the Borden government and the Nationalists? Does it ever think that Sir Robert Borden, with his indecision, and lack of courage on the part of many of his colleagues, will ever be able to do anything in that direction? Does it think, for instance, that Hon. Frank Cochrane who took Mr. Bourassa up to Sudbury and had a brass band to greet him, will carry out such a policy? Or Hon. Robert try, and succeeding in that might have Rogers, or Hon. John D. Reid, or any other of the political lights in the administration? . They have been five years in office, and have done nothing in this direction, altho the thing has been steadily growing now for seven years, and is worse today than ever it was. We still stand up by what we said before-that both parties are entangled in the meshes of a certain anti-British element in Quebec, as the writer of the letter above quoted certainly knows, as he has been a close observer of the acts and records of has had the courage to tell the people of both parties.

The capital City of Ottawa has been several times threatened with mob rule! Even in the great City of Montreal English-speaking people, who have never been unfair to their French fellow-countrymen, were never so concerned as to the future of Canada, of British institutions and British ideas of liberty and equality, as they are today. And when The World says this, it knows what it is speaking about, and has the authority of men of the highest position, who are of all races and the whole of Canada at swing at the rear of the above address strong Britishers and have the welfare

VOITE Banker aus These excerpts from a wonderful series of letters show the favor with which Business Life Assurance is regarded by Bankers in connection with credit accomodation to their customers.

The letters have been reproduced in fac-simile in a booklet entitled "Your Banker Says," published by the Life Underwriters' Association of Canada.

We will gladly send you a copy if you will write for it on your business letterhead.

Company of Canada

HEAD OFFICE - - - TORONTO, CANADA

Branches and Agents in all Important Centres,

SEPTEMBER 26 1916

The General Manager of one of the Canadian Chartered Banks writes: "In our forms for application for credit, the amount of Life Assurance carried has to be specifically cited ... When the bank feels that one individual's life is essential to the best interests and conduct of the business, the bank urges . . . the carrying of a substantial amount of Life Assurance."

One quotation reads :

"The protection is one which is regarded most highly by bankers in considering applications for credit." Another writes:

'It (Life Assurance) is sometimes the subject of special enquiry on our part.

And we quote another who says: "We very often ask business men to protect us, as well as themselves, by taking out new, or increasing the Life Assurance they hold."

carried German trenches on a six-mile continuous front to a depth of a mile between Combles and Martinpuich in a powerful assault that also won the strongly fortified villages of Les Boeufs and Morval Both these villages were bastions linked up by several lines of trenches with fireproof curtains and elaborate dug-outs. Morval stands on some heights north of Combles, and it was rendered doubly strong by subterranean quarries, trenches and wire entanglements. The possession of it and Les Boeufs by the British practically cuts the communications of the Germans with Combles. The capture of these two points is regarded by Sir Douglas Haig as of considerable military importance. The front broken in by this latest blow consists of the remainder of the German third system of defence on the British front. The first half was broken thru by the action in which the Canadians took part more than a week ago.

The French conducted their action on a different plan. Instead of making an almost straight forward drive like the British, the French, who occupied a sharper wedge with its apex based on Bouchavesnes, struck north, east and south from within that enclave. At least four simultaneous assaults were made. The first attack completed the cutting of the enemy in Combles from the east by driving to the northeast of Combles and carrying their lines forward to the hamlet of Fregillicourt, and establishing them firmly in its outskirts. The second attack captured all the strongly organized ground be-tween Fregilicourt and Hill 148 and took Rancourt. The third attack drove southeastward and eastward from the Combles road to as far as Bouchavesnes for a depth of five-eighths of a mile, it took a hill northeast of Bouchavesnes and it reached a point southeast of Hill 130. The fourth attack gained the French several systems of trenches in the vicinity of the Canal du Nord from

In that event the advantage will be against the less hardy Teutopic troops. The virtual slowing-up of the war in other theatres, excepting the western

The virtual slowing-up of the war in other theatres, excepting the western makes it all the more advisable for the allies to be prepared to wage vigorous war in the Balkans. They may have three months of campaign weather in those mountains ere the coming of the cold weather makes fighting almost out of the question for unacclimatized British and French troops. At present the Serbians seem to be the only troops that are working at full pressure in a serious endeavor against the Bulgarian right flank. They have made fur-ther gains towards Monastir. The British excursion across the Struma River was apparently more in the shape of an extensive series of raids than a serious effort against the enemy, altho from the original announcement the impres-sion was created, as it was probably intended it should be created, that the move was an affair of main force.
