

LIFE IN CAPITAL MUST BE PLEASANT

Many Senators and Representatives Want to Get Back There.

Washington, Oct. 31.—Congressional life must be pleasant, at least the number of senators and representatives seeking re-election in November would indicate as much. Of the 82 senators whose term expires next March 3, 24 are candidates to succeed themselves in the House approximately nine out of every ten members desire to retain their seats. Including the incumbents, 95 candidates are in the field for the senatorial seats to be handed out at the polls November 4.

Senator Fernald, Republican, Maine, is the only Republican senator to be sure of his seat for another six years, having been re-elected last September by the voters of his state, where balloting is carried out about six weeks earlier than in other parts of the nation.

Democratic senators practically assured of another term, as they are unopposed in the coming election, are Harris, Georgia; Harrison, Mississippi; Randall, Louisiana; Robinson, Arkansas; and Sheppard, Texas.

Republican senators who must fight for their seats are Borah, Idaho; Brookhart, Iowa; Bursam, New Mexico; Capper, Kansas; Couzens, Michigan; Edge, New Jersey; Keyes, New Hampshire; McNary, Oregon; Norris, Nebraska; Phipps, Colorado; and Warren, Wyoming.

Democratic senators confronted with opposition are Glass, Virginia; Heflin,

Alabama; Simmons, North Carolina; Stanley, Kentucky; Walsh, Massachusetts; and Walsh, Montana. The Democratic candidates from southern states, however, are regarded as practically assured of being returned to the senate, as nomination is considered equivalent to election.

Senator Johnson, Farm-Labor, Minnesota, is opposed by four candidates. Two candidates are contesting for the seat of the late Senator Colt, Republican Rhode Island. Both are seeking election to the unexpired term which ends March 3, and to the full term that runs for six years from March 4.

Five senators were defeated for nomination in primary contests. They are Senators Shields, Tennessee; and Deal, South Carolina, Democrats; and Ball, Delaware, McCormick of Illinois, and Sterling of South Dakota, Republicans.

In Colorado Senator Phipps, Republican, seeking re-election, is opposed by Senator Adams, Democrat, who, instead of seeking re-election for the unexpired term that he has been serving, has come out against Phipps for the full six-year term.

Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, is opposed by Speaker Gillett, who is retiring from the House next March.

Among leaders in the senate who are opposed for re-election are Senators Walsh of Montana and Simmons of North Carolina.

Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, the Republican leader, is not up for re-election, having four years of his term remaining, while Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, although up for re-election, is unopposed.

Senators La Follette, Republican, and Wheeler, Democrat, of Wisconsin and Montana respectively, also have several years of their terms remaining. Two senators, Owen, Democrat, Oklahoma, and Elkins, Republican, West Virginia, are not seeking re-election.

Besides the regular 82 senatorial vacancies, several states will hold elections to choose senators to fill unexpired terms.

In the House 988 members are seeking to retain their seats. Of this number 194 are Republicans, 198 Democrats, one Farmer-Labor, one Independent, and one Socialist.

Republicans defeated for re-nomination in primary elections are: MacLafferty, California; Miller, Illinois; Moore, Indiana; Fairfield, Indiana; Hull, Iowa; Payrot, Maine; Davis, Minnesota; Clarke, New York; Foster, Ohio; Edmonds, Pennsylvania; and Werts, Pennsylvania.

Democrats defeated for re-nomination in primary elections are: Clark, Florida; Moore, Georgia; Park, Georgia; Tague, Massachusetts; Egan, New Jersey; and Logan, South Carolina.

Republicans not candidate for re-election are: Mae E. Nolan, California; McKensie, Illinois; Moore, Illinois; Miller, Illinois; Sanders, Indiana; Eyal, Indiana; Gillett, Massachusetts; Paige, Massachusetts; Winslow, Massachusetts; Dallinger, Massachusetts; Atwater, Minnesota; Larson, Minnesota; Schall, Minnesota; Ward, New York; Snyder, New York; Young, North Dakota; Cable, Ohio; Fleetwood, Vermont; Rosenbloom, West Virginia, and Reed, West Virginia.

TEMPLE OF MUSIC IN TORONTO URGED

Matter of Interest Here Because of Father Cloran's Suggestion.

In connection with the suggestion of Rev. James Cloran, C. S. R., rector of St. Peter's church here for competition in music in St. John, the following from the Toronto Globe is of interest:

Erection of a Temple of Music in Exhibition Park, and the pending the accomplishment of this project, the installation of a pipe organ in the College, were suggested by Alderman W. A. Summerville, representing Mayor Hogg, at the seventh annual meeting of the Canadian Bureau for the Advancement of Music, held at the National Club.

Bureau's Good Work.

Many speakers stressed the value of the work which the bureau was doing, and the importance of music in the home. Tribute was paid to the work of the Paganet Chorus and to the Music Day at the Canadian National Exhibition, both organized by the bureau.

That very definite progress has been made to develop interest in and appreciation of good music for its cultural value to the home, community and national life was evidenced by the report of the director, J. S. Atkinson, who outlined the activities of the bureau during the last year. In an effort to stimulate things musical, the bureau was supplying a series of weekly articles to newspapers and periodicals throughout the Dominion, Mr. Atkinson said.

During the last year a competition for the best essay on "The advantage of investments to make possible the cultural enjoyment of music in the home, as compared with spending money for things that offer chiefly pleasure," had been held, and the best hundred essays were now in the hands of the final adjudicators who are expected to announce the results within the next two weeks. It was said that more than 3,000 essays were received from all over Canada.

Music Competitions.

Music competitions at the Canadian National Exhibition, the report stated, had grown from 74 competitors in 1921 to 331 in 1924, and competitors were now coming, not only from Ontario, but from points as far distant as Moose Jaw.

Music Day and the Paganet Chorus, both organized by the bureau, had proved a splendid success, and high tribute was paid to the activities of Dr. H. A. Fricker for securing such wonderful results with the chorus. Dr. Fricker is honorary president of the bureau. That interest in music at the C. N. E. was growing was indicated by the figures cited by Mr. Atkinson, which showed that the attendance on the first Music Day in 1921 was 76,000, and in 1924 114,900. Band competitions had aroused a considerable interest. Music festivals held in May, 1923, and May, 1924, had been a splendid success, but the lack of public support had

TOURISTS BOOSTED BRITISH TRADE

Spent Freely and Found Shopmen Reaching Out for Trade.

(United Press.)

Washington, Oct. 31.—Tourist expenditures have been heavy in Great Britain this season, U. S. Trade Commissioner Charles E. Lyon of London reports to the Department of Commerce. The inducements to spend just a little more are ingenious and abundant, Lyon finds.

Newspapers carry advertisements of handsome apartments, above the market rate, which are characterized as "suitable for visiting Americans." Other advertisements request "charitable Americans to help one cause or another."

A hospital in need of endowment puts its appeal "American kindly take note." John Harvard's house and the Shakespeare memorials at Stratford-on-Avon, Sulgrave Manor and Gray's church at Stoke Poges, have a strong appeal—sentimental and financial—to Americans.

A wealthier class went to England this summer, Lyon reports. The American Bar Association Convention, for example, brought over more than twice as many as expected. Top hats in the newest mode, were in great demand by the lawyers who were there at the King's Garden Party, Lyon relates as a sidelight. The wives of the attorneys, too, found it necessary to spend a great deal of cash in outfitting for this same function.

Americans in London loaded themselves with works of art. The belief still holds sway in the average tourist mind that many British families because of post-war depression were forced to sell heirlooms. Many jewelry stores to satisfy this demand have special departments exclusively for old-fashioned brooches, pins, amulets and the like. These, the customer is told, are handled on a commission basis for needy owners.

Oriental rugs, Lyon finds, met a ready sale and heavily overstocked dealers who felt little optimism in the spring are now sold out. Old and ornamental silver also had a heavy sale, not only to Americans, but to visitors from the Argentine as well, who have extended their buying operations beyond their customary field in Paris. Table silver was eagerly sought by Americans.

However, the visiting American does not find the English tradesman so mercenary as his continental brothers. The Britisher is more subtle and is quick to sense the demand for a certain class of goods. Of course, when something is in great demand, the price just naturally goes up.

FIRST RECEPTION.
Mrs. Gerald Cox received for the first time since her marriage Wednesday afternoon at her home, 10 First street. She wore a gown of poudre blue canton crepe. She was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. Charles Green and her husband's mother, Mrs. Robert Cox. Miss Bertie Green opened the door for the guests who were ushered by Mrs. O. S. Dykeman. Mrs. P. I. Gagey and Mrs. C. Pugh presided in the dining room, which was very pretty in decorations of white and yellow flowers. The young ladies who served were Miss Gertrude Green, Miss Eleanor Rutland and Miss Helen Trearlin. Mrs. Cox entertained her assistants and their gentlemen friends at bridge in the evening.

CLASS ENTERTAINED.
Mrs. Frank Taylor, Douglas avenue, was hostess to 25 members of the young ladies' class of German street Baptist Sunday school last evening, when sewing was enjoyed as the members discussed plans for the winter's activities. Miss Nettie Hatfield, teacher of the class, was a special guest. Practice was held for the play that the class will present shortly for aid of the benevolent funds of the class. Mrs. Taylor served refreshments during the evening.
