ence With Rain in the Face in Which the Great Sloux Was Thoroughly Coved

Captain Edward P. Brewer of the regu-Captain Edward P. Brewer of the regu-ir cavalry while a lieutenant was sta-oned at Fort Sheridan with his troop uring the World's fair. Brewer is known mong his brother officers and the society of Chicago as "Pansy," a name given to im for his extreme nicety in dress and his erformances as escort militaire to the In-unta Eulalie. But he is no carpet knight, shis encounter with old Rain-in-the-Face and the state of the state of will demonstrate.

During all the years of his service, with the one exception of his tour at Sheridan.
Brewer has been in the field or frontier gerrisons. He has put in many long years on the trails of Apaches ard Sioux and is noted as an Indian fighter. The encounter with the wilty, treacherous, cross eyed, how legged old chief and medicine man was the aftermath of the last uprising among the Sioux. Brewer and his command went forth from Rosebud and rounded up old "Rain" and his band and forced them to get back to the eroney. This made whe old Indian very see and he laid for a chance to get even.
He get even, but eventually quit loser.
This is low it all came about:

Son after his return Mr. Brewer applied for a few days' leave of absence to visit some francès a few hundred miles away. Having roceived permission, he started in the ambulance one morning with a party of ladies for the railroad depotitions head they were considerably mpressive and vehement words to the old briver, who spoke Sioux about as well as he Indian himself.

What does he say. Burgess, and why loss in the tus pass? 'inquired the lieusents, scenting some devilment on the sart of his copper colored friend.

'it's Rain-in-the-Face, sir, and he says he wants your yellow vest.'

Impressed with the fact that there was no alternative and moved by the enterestic of the frightened ladies, the lieutenant reluctantly disrobed and passed the soveted prize to the redskin, who received it with a malicious grin of triumph and then allowed the ambulance to proceed. Brewer had no intention of letting the matter drop here, but resigned himself to the sting of the premeditated insult with as good a grace as possible under the circumstances, firmly resolving to fix that Indian at the first opportunity that offered. He requested the driver and ladies to maintain the strictest silence.

'After the expiration of his leave he returned to the post. A few days after he chanced to meet a few Indian boys and promised a big silver dollar to the one who should first inform him when Rain-in-the-Face came into the post. A month went by, and Brewer was sitting one afternoon with a group of officers expatiating on the virtues of the first sergeant of K troop, an load or agond that an Indian boy was immanued that an Indian boy was immanued.

with a group of officers expatiating on the virtues of the first sergeant of K troop, an old dragoon of 20 years service, when he was interrupted by the steward, who announced that an Indian' boy was impatiently demanding to see him.

Immediately the almost forgotten episode of the vest occurred to Brewer and, unceremoniously seeing his campaign hat, he rushed for the door. A little half naked Indian boy informed him that Rain-in-the-Face had just come into camp and then reached out his hand for the everted dollar.

Mr. Brewer ordered his horse and, mounting, rode across the parade in the direction of the now visible redskin, who was heading up the well besten path to the "canteen." The first intimation old "Rain" received that any one was anxious to see him was the whistling of a bullet past his head. Hastily glancing in the direction of the shot, he saw his old cavalry friend headed toward him at full speed. Rain-in-the-Face immediately wheeled his supple little pony in the direction of the agency and set out af full speed. Brewer, seeing that he had his man on the run, satisfied himself with keeping a couple of hundred yards in the rear. The chase led up hill and down dale, the prairle few by so fast that it made one dizzy to look at the tall grass. Brewer discharged an occasional shot to make the Indian appreciate the gravity of his situation. The chief was now thoroughly frightened and gave vent to his feelings by a series of short-high shrieks at every shot.

has a series of series of the first sepes, flung himself to the ground and rushed inside to grasp a weapon, when Brewer's rife rang out again, and a ball tore its way through the dry buffalo hides of the Indian's tent. The sturfly lieutenant reined up his panting steed in front of the equalid hovel and with his rife at his shoulder summoned the terrified savage.

squalid hovel and with his rifle at his shoulder summoned the terrified savage to come out. Hain-in-the-Face sheepishly obeyed, with his hands held over his head in token of surrender. Brewer made the Indian disrobe. He removed his feathered crnaments, ghost shire, breechelout, beaded leggings and moccasins until he was as devoid of clothes as on his natal day. Brewer then directed him to place his apparal on the fiames, which he sheepishly did. The finery was soon converted into ashes, and his most prized and boast-et trophy, the yellow vest, was next ordered, groduced. Its pristine gaudy spiendor rewas gone, as it had too often partaken of the food of its thievish possessor. With another shot or two which threw up the dirt at the Indian's feet Rain-in-the-Face executed some rapid steps never known to wardanen or puppy feast and disappeared into the corner of his dingy tepee. Rain-in-the-Face, the great Ogalalia Sloux, chief warrior and medicine man, the pride of his race, was cowed by a boy lleutenant half his age.

Lieutenant Brewer and Rain-in-the-Face frequently met afterward, but the Indian skulked at the heels of the young lleutenant like a whipped car.—Chicago Chronicle.

"The demand for new bills for shopping is on the increase among women," said a local bank teller, "and is getting to be a nuisance. A great many women won's handle any currency that is not absolutely fresh and crisp, and in the north all 'the banks that make a specialty of catering to women's custom keep a supply constandly on hand for that particular purpose. Sometimes the bills are hard to get, especially those of certain denominations, and gold is unpopular on account of the danger of confusing the $2.50 coin with a bright penny.

"It is not generally known, but bills can be washed and ironed as easily as a pocket handkerchief. A wealthy woman of my acquaintance has all her money laundered before she uses it. She turns the notes over to her maid, who washes them thoroughly in hot water with ordinary scapsuds and spreads them cut on a table to dry. Then she demons them alightly and presess them with a medium hot smoothing iron. If the bill is not frayed, this precess will make it as bright and crisp as when it first left the treasury. It is actionishing how dirty money gets. If one could see the water in which a dosen commonly circulated bills were washed, it would give them a permanent aversion to the trade of teller."—Now Orleans

The big countryman came nervously into the office. "There isn't any danger, is there, do you think?" he asked. It was a cold day, but he mosped the beads of perspiration from his forebead. From his desk the bullness man looked up surprised. The visitor froin the country continued: "You seem to take it mighty quietly, but they say you'can get used to almost anything—and perhaps you were in the war and don't mind dangers any more." "What?" There was a flat note in the usiness man's voice as if he thought he was being jollied. "And," the countryman went on, "you aren't a big man. Now I weigh 215 pounds—that's over 100 pounds to the foot—and I'm not quiescent either." He shifted uneasily from one foot to the other. The business man reached forward and that's over 100 pounds to the foot—and I'm not quiescent either." He shifted uneasily from one foot to the other.

The business man reached forward and grabbed a long ruler. He wished to be prepared for the worst if the big man became unamenable to arguments? He said quietly: "Now, my dear sir, there's no use getting excited. Everything's all right in this office, and we don't expect an earthquake or a visit from the polices or any of the other dangers of the city." He spoke in a soothing voice and tried to fix the countryman with his spe; he had read of the power of the human eye, and couldn't remember whether it was good for madmen, or only for wild beasts. There would be no harm in trying it anyway, he thought.

The countryman gave what sounded like a little gasp of relief at the column tone of the other man. "I'm glad you feet, isn't it?" he said with a feeble smile. "That makes it a little safer—only about 50 pounds to the foot." The business man began to get curious as to the delusion of his strange visitor. "Would you mind"—he spoke more soothingly than ever, not to rouse the fear subsiding—"selling me just what it is has frightened you so?"

"Why, certainly. It's that sign I saw out in the hall: This floor will carry 80 pounds per foot, distributed quiescent load.' I didn't know but that the commissioner of buildings or somebody had put it there as a warning to fat men like me to sorter quiesce when they step around the place. I'm a little nervous ever since I fell through the hole in our haymow, and thought I'd ask you about it before I did much r'arin' up on my hind legs."
