The city dredge has been at work for the past ten days at Marble Cove dredging a channel to allow the sewage to escape. The cove has been steadily filled up with silt partly from the river and partly from the sewage dumped into it. The water is now only about three feet deep and at dry tide it is less than that. In the past the sewage flowing into the cove has caused unpleasant conditions, and it is to remedy this that the dredging is being done.

M. R. A.'s furniture sale is still going on in the Market Square building and the enormous values being given for tiny prices are surprising. It is not ordinary furniture that is being sold but the highest class, though prices are the lowest. The sale of costume cloths at M. R. A.'s is a really important event, inasmuch as the qualities are exceptional, the values seasons and the colors fashionable. No better values can be offered in Canada today.

TIES OF THE EMPIRE DRAWING CLOSER Colonial Secretary Talks of Imperial Progress.

Age of Development Has Succeeded That of Expansion—Banquet of the Colonial Institute.

LONDON, June 19.—His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales presided at the annual dinner of the Royal Colonial Institute at the Hotel Cecil. The gathering numbered more than three hundred and fifty. The chairman was supported at the top of the table by the Lord Chamberlain, the Duke of Devonshire, the Earl of Devonshire, the Earl of Dudley, the Earl of Glasgow, the Earl of Jersey, the Archbishop of Sydney, Lord Lamington, Lord Alverstone, and others.

Those who take the most radical view of the power of the human will to control the processes and reactions of the organism, even those that have been regarded as subject wholly to physical and chemical laws, will read with interest of a series of experiments by Dr. Otto von der Pfordten described in the Naturwissenschaften Wochenschrift in an article entitled "Electricity and the Problem of Attention."

The author has shown, as he thinks, that the action of electricity on the human body may be modified or even neutralized by the state of the mind. Aspihals has already noted that electricians who when asleep have touched dangerous live wires have suffered no injury except a burn; and Jellinek found that an ordinarily deadly current did not harm rabbits when they were chloroformed.

"EXHIBITION OF COURAGE." Says an editorial in The Evening Post (New York, May 23), commenting on the German article: "Of greater interest still are the cases he cites where the action of the current is neutralized by a man's strained expectation or attention. Electricians, he says, often touch live wires with impunity, and ascertain if there is a current in them; and while this conscious and deliberate act results in no harm, rabbits when they were chloroformed."

"MENTAL INDOLENCE." This had its source in a difficulty in breathing due to his too flat chest; a defect which, being corporeal, he could not overcome; but its influence on his thoughts and actions I have mastered, by averting my attention from this feeling, as if it did not concern me at all. And thus I recovered complete composure and cheerfulness by a mere effort of the will.

Such a therapeutic application of will-power Kant regards as the converse of the state of mind which makes many lay readers of medical books fancy they have all the symptoms described therein. Dr. Hufeland was convinced that most nervous disorders are caused by mental indolence and passiveness, a weak yielding to bodily sensations and impressions; and he cites Pinal, who found that during the excitement of the French Revolution, a number of persons who had for years been weak and stolid became healthy and strong, and were especially among the indolent members of the aristocracy, whose nervous troubles disappeared entirely.

The Japanese have a special method of training the will from early childhood, and it has been plausibly argued that it was this sturdy will-power more than anything else that enabled them to overcome the Russians.

PHILOSOPHICAL PART. The writer is of opinion that Dr. Pfordten's case would have been stronger had he mentioned the kind of current employed in these various experiments. The difference between the direct and alternating current, or the rate of frequency of the latter, is often sufficient to account for its ability to withstand high voltage. Be this as it may, the philosophical part of Pfordten's case is by no means novel. Not to mention modern instances, the last work of the philosopher Kant was entitled "On the Power of the Mind to Master Morbid Feelings by a Mere Effort of the Will."
