IN THE CEMETERY AT NEW ORLEANS.

(Written by the late Joseph M. Hill, after the cholera season of 1832.)
I am among the silent habitues Which dwell in this city of decay
By a lonely hour a fitting solitude
For thought to travel on its onward way Along your steps, and soon your GROUND Imagination opens your sepulchre, Lift your dream, and smile about the dim
The awful book of Death, whose legend stir The soul, nor aught conceals, nor in its lesson ends.

Oh, tender mother! Oh, most pious soul!
Which builds up to the mantle wreath above,
Which sweeps corruption from the grave,
Which smooths the wrinkles of the soul,
Which smooths the wrinkles of the soul,
Which smooths the wrinkles of the soul,
Which smooths the wrinkles of the soul,

What means these lengthened moulds of wailand earth
Which sweep like margins round death's gloomy page?
No more your flower, nor wood, here springs to birth.
The cherished devotion to assume?
Here lie the spoils of pestilential rage,
The shrouded victims of the deadly disease,
The just, the just, the just, the just,
The just, the just, the just, the just,
The just, the just, the just, the just,
The just, the just, the just, the just,

Thousands are cast in these desecrating beds,
The proud, the base, the wretched Intoxicated, unforgotten, among heathen heads,
The fearful deposit, in his fearful hour, Shook his fall, scarce of sleep, and master And hard they lie, and of the milken host What memory remains? They died, good folk!
New friends, new mates, - are quickly Said where some cherished name hath left its rest.

Oh! the teeming volume, Pass again!
Another mortal space upon the night
The restless waves of the sea, and rain Beat on these shrouded bones, discolored white.
A hard nodules in your grinning shell,
Sport in the sun, and gleam in the light, Ye dead, ye dead! more humbling tribute tell
In your hour than in a thousand strewed swail.

I am among you; and I feel a stern
And bitter joy in reading from the grave
Its words of monument and of epitaph.
The cultured marble? The power to combat Yet there, at some forgotten tomb, I weep
And you poor wretch, or whom the rain Not sooner will breed worms. Life breeds in Alike "hath blossomed" alike, or bleak and barren heads.

Grant, chastely, King, I may I feel a pride In taking from thy form each vain display;
With daring hand I sweep your vain display;
And meet thy terror with undimmed eye.
Where darts the spirit when he looks on I seek not; but in state, what'er that be,
In future life, - the base he looks on A god to guide my path; break that for me, I labor with a nail my hours of misery.

Life! Life is naught, the world a rayless coil, Which reels beneath its own confusion through Of earth and air, and of the elements, What is that mind which lifts its soul among Less than the dust? The power to combat Wrong.
And all at once, all himself grown strong,
He has the faith, or believes, or doubts, Spreading a hell or earth to build a heaven on the wind.

His grandeur, glory, - what! A shrouded robe
That gleams not in the sun, nor in the dew,
His grandeur, glory, - what! A shrouded robe
That gleams not in the sun, nor in the dew,
His grandeur, glory, - what! A shrouded robe
That gleams not in the sun, nor in the dew,
His grandeur, glory, - what! A shrouded robe
That gleams not in the sun, nor in the dew,

NOTES AND NEWS.

UNITED STATES.

A New York professor is lecturing on the cultivation of the ear. He doesn't say when is the best time to pull it.

Samuel A. Adams was recently granted a divorce by a Vermont court on account of the "intolerable severity of Sarah, his wife."

The ministers of St. Joseph, Mo., propose to send a committee to the different newspapers to pray for the editors.
There is a probability that the editors will be able to stand it.

The small-pox continues to spread in South Windham, Conn. All business places and schools are closed and the surrounding towns have placed restrictions upon all travel. The village is well isolated.

The coy and unphilosophical commercial traveller from Boston will no longer raid over the rural districts and ravish the hearts of rustic beauties, if certain large establishments in Boston carry out their announced intention to dispense with these peripatetic tooters. The employers have discovered that the game isn't worth the candle.

Detroit has, in one of her public institutions, a first-class, genuine leper, aged 21, and covered with scales which alternately fall off and are renewed. The scales cover some portions of the body to the thickness of half an inch and look like dried codfish skin. The case is considered beyond the reach of cure, and the poor victim looks to death as an improvement upon life.

GENERAL.

To curb a fast young man - Bridal him.
"Kiss me," was all that she said.
"Modern novel," - That was "enough said" to any young man.

Benedict says the curtain lecture season lasts from January 1 to December 31, and no postponement on the weather account.

The lady who obtained $25,000 for a breach of promise says she is ready for another at the same price, ten per centum off for cash.

"Well, Bridget, if I engage you, I shall want you to stay at home whenever I wish to go out." "Well, ma'am, I have no objections, provided, you do the same when I wish to go out."

The most artful dodger is a married man who lives in this city. He points with pride to the shattered wall opposite ## his seat at the breakfast-table, where the tea-cups, salt-cellars, and slop-bowls that she heaved off him struck.

At a party, while a young lady was playing with peculiar brilliancy of touch, a bystander exclaimed, "I give the world for those fingers!" "Perhaps you might get the whole hand by asking," said the young lady's observant mother.

PARISHION.

Embroidered shawls are something new.
They are of black watered silk, embroidered with black floss and fine jet beads; or of black, embroidered in colors. They are very handsome, and destined to become very fashionable.

Napoleon blue will be one of the fashionable colors in Easter costume, also mahogany-brown, and the overcoat of black, embroidered in colors. They are very handsome, and destined to become very fashionable.

Evening dresses are no longer made with very deep trains, and the overcoat as it used to be is entirely done away with. All the trimming intended to be seen is concentrated on the front, and the coat train commences at the side seams. This is something very elegant about this new style.

Jim Buckley's Burial.

As the saloon was repaired boards, and unplastered, the flames made rapid progress; so that Jim Slipson, the proprietor, had barely time to save two or three armfuls of bottles. With these he retired to the opposite side of the street, where the spectators stood; and he was mournfully contemplating the effect of caloric upon alcohol, when he suddenly started and exclaimed, -

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

"How 'bout a fellow that saves Inghin bibles like that?"

And Jim reads the inscription to this day - From the "Quillings Parlor" in March Old and New.
