I SUPPOSE there is not in the whole of nephysician's experience, anything in bumar suffering which calls forth his sympath, and pity, to such an extent, as to witness the exeruciating pains of a poor mortal, sunering from that fearful disease. RHEUMATISM!

Heretofore there has been a considerable diversity of opinion smong medical men, as to the true character of this disease. Some locating it in the fibrous or muscular tissues of the system, and others viewing it as an acute nervous disease arising from a poison circulating it, the blood, and further it is admitted that Rheumatism can never be thoroughly cured without exterminating such poisonous matters from the blood, by a constitutional internal remedy. We feel confident that none will feel better satisfication, and rejoice more, than the conscientionus physican, who has found out that a cure for this stabborn disease has been discovered. The following testimony from a gentleman of standing, and high respectability, and well known to the Canadian public, cannot fail to satisfy all that the

Think of a man full of those bland emotions which the thought of a good dinner naturally stimulates, walking with a smile of selection on his countenance into a Detroit meat shop and—sitting down upon the butcher's living buil-terier curled up in a chair! What a decided change must have come over the spirit of that gentleman's dream! How altered in an instant must have been his views of a flesh diet! The account significantly says: "He changed his mind, and went to another shop." Sitting at the festive board had, for that day at least, become an impossibility.
