The Pride of Llewellyn

Can you do more to me than that? Not for if you were to kill me, you could only destroy the life of my body, whereas, by your late horrible treatment, you essayed the destruction of my intellect and will, which are parts of the soul! Can you ever do as much as that to me again? No, for hear me, Mrs. Jay, you will never have the opportunity! For from your hand I will never take anything what-ever to eat or drink! And while I stay in your house I will never take anything to eat or drink that may by any means be made the vehicle of your soul-destroying drugs. Sooner than do so I will starve myself to death. Yes, Mrs. Jay, I have the spirit to defy death, even the slow and painful death of starvation! But I have not the will to become again the passive, senseless, degraded tool of crime that you would have made me! Perhaps Providence may send me deliverance. I shall pray for it. In the meantime my part is to preserve the purity of my intellect and will, even if necessary at the cost of suffering and death. And so, while I stay with you neither food nor drink, that can possibly be made the medium of poison, shall pass

"You Are Under Weight, My Boy"

"YES, sir." "Do you know what that means?" "No, sir." "It means that your body is not properly nourished. You are not getting the right food, or else not obtaining full benefit of the food you eat! Are you easily tired?" "Yes, sir." "How are you getting along at school?" "Not very well." "Now, I am going to send a report to your parents, so that they may know your condition, and I want you to do what I tell you, so as to regain your normal weight." "All right, sir." "You can never expect to get far in athletics, or school either, so long as your blood is thin for lack of proper nourishment and your nerves starved and exhausted." "We shall go a little easy on exercise, and I have asked your parents to see that you eat plenty of plain, nourishing food. I have also suggested the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so as to enrich the blood and tone up your nervous system." "Is that a medicine?" "Yes, I suppose you might call it that, but it is entirely different to most medicines, because it builds up tissue instead of tearing it down. It is what is called a restorative. It sharpens the appetite, improves digestion and helps you to obtain full benefit of the food you eat. We are not much on medicines around here, but Chase's Nerve Food has helped so many under-weight boys whom I know that I never lose an opportunity to recommend it." "I hope it helps me, for I would like to be able to do 'stunts' like the other fellows, and I don't seem to have the strength now." "You are ready to do your part then? That is what I want to know." "Yes, sir, I am." "We will weigh you every week, and I am sure we shall soon have you all right." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmansons, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

my lips, though I faintly!" said Gladys, closing those pallid lips with the sad firmness of a young martyr.

"You will find that it requires more than courage to starve yourself to death. It requires fortitude!" said the lady vindictively.

But Gladys had "said her say", and made no reply.

"I suppose I must bear with you in your present mood. But do not carry your madness too far, my girl! Remember, there are such things as asylums, where the frenzy of lunatics is restrained, and where the world seldom troubles itself to inquire about them," said Mrs. Llewellyn turning away.

In doing so her glances fell upon Ennis, who had been forgotten until the present moment. Ennis who had remained in the room through the whole interview, and though only half in the confidence of Mrs. Llewellyn had stood apart with open eyes and ears, watching the speakers and drinking in every word of the conversation.

"Why are you staring here?" curiously demanded her mistress.

"If you please, ma'am, you never told me to go," said the girl.

"I tell you now then!" exclaimed the lady.

And Ennis left the room.

Mrs. Llewellyn soon followed, locking the door after her.

CHAPTER XVI

Mr. Stukely Assent: Himself. Passing down to the next floor, Mrs. Llewellyn saw Mr. Stukely in his room busily engaged in packing his travelling trunk.

"What now?" inquired his mother looking in.

"I am going back to the University. I am not going to stay here to be made a laughing stock of!"

"What! will you forsake Gladys in her present state of health?" demanded the lady.

"Oh, hush! about her state of health! She's well enough. She's only a-doing of me, that's all! And she shan't make a fool of me again! Not if I know it!"

"Nor call me an idiot, a third time neither," said Mr. Stukely, cramming his wedding coat into the middle of his trunk.

"James Stukely, what do you mean?"

"I mean to go back to college, and I mean to start by the night train. Law, mother, I'm not so anxious to marry Cousin Gladys! It was only yesterday you said I ever consented. Catch me consenting again, that's all! But I thought as long as she was dying in love with me, and you was anxious for it, I'd do the handsome thing, and I did it! But Lord as for me I don't think Cousin Gladys can hold a candle to Nelly Blythe."

"To whom?" cried Mrs. Llewellyn, in alarm.

"To Nelly Blythe, the young lady that makes my shirt at college. If you could only see her once, mother, you would—"

"My goodness, what's that?" cried Mr. Stukely, for Mrs. Llewellyn before she had heard his sentence half out, had dropped breathless into the nearest chair.

"James Stukely, do you mean to kill me?" she cried, almost hysterically.

"What made you think so? I wouldn't hurt anybody else do it! I was going to tell you something that I thought would please you."

"What was it, then?" inquired the lady in a faint voice, with some feeling of relief and some of curiosity.

"Why, seeing you was married so badly, I was just going to tell you what a nice girl Nelly Blythe was, and how I could go down there and marry her tomorrow if I like, and—"

"Now what's the matter?" he broke off and exclaimed in consternation, for Mrs. Llewellyn with a cry between a howl and a shriek, had clapped her hands to her head.

"I shall go mad!" she exclaimed.

"Extraordinary! What for? What have I done? There's no pleasing you mother!" said Mr. Stukely, dropping himself down in a corresponding chair.

Mrs. Llewellyn groaned in real anguish of spirit.

Mr. Stukely sat staring at her, pulling his yellow mustache and sighing.

"Extraordinary!"

Suddenly she started up, rushed at him, seized his arm and shrieked in his ear.

"James Stukely! If you do make a low marriage, I shall—hang myself!" and so saying she flung off his arm.

Mr. Stukely's chin fell, his eyebrows rose, his eyes started, and his cheeks blanched with horror.

"Extraordinary!—extraordinary!" he exclaimed as fast as he could speak. Then, finding more definite words, he stammered:

"I-I-I won't do it, mother, if you don't like it! It was all—"

"You thought you wanted me married and settled, and if Cousin Gladys wouldn't have me I knew the young lady that made my shirt, Miss Nelly Blythe—"

"Don't in name her, lest I do something desperate!" cried Mrs. Llewellyn, stamping.

"Well, I won't! I won't! I won't! Only for goodness gracious sake, mother don't talk about doing anything desperate, especially hanging, the very idea of which gives me a sort of a choking in the throat, and fullness in the head! But tell me what will please you, mother, and I'll do it."

"James Stukely, unpack that trunk and remain quietly where you are, until I settle where we shall go next. Will you do this?" she sharply demanded.

"Yes, yes, yes, mother, I'll do anything. Goodness knows it was all to please you! I'd do any thing to please you except it was something I considered very wrong like marrying a girl on the sly, or taking another man's sweetheart or something," said Mr. Stukely, beginning to unpack as fast as he could.

With this little victory, which she knew might be turned into defeat in another hour, Mrs. Llewellyn was forced to be contented.

Gladys kept her word. As her fainting fit involved no consequent illness, she soon left her bed. But she did not resume her recent childish amusements. She never now noticed the bright pictures on the walls, nor the Dresden china images, nor the stuffed birds. She never even looked at the

TAKE MEDICINE IN CAPSULE FORM

Gives Quicker Action—The Ideal Method for Home Treatment.

Why medicines in capsule form are best was recently explained by a medical authority as follows: The object of taking medicine is to get quick results and also make the taking as easy as possible. The capsule form does this. The patient does not revolt at the gelatine coating, no matter how repellent to the taste are the drugs contained. The capsule also goes down the throat without inconvenience.

"In the stomach the gelatine coating dissolves almost immediately and the medicines start work promptly. The capsule is far superior to the hard pill, which, especially if it has been exposed to the air, often passes through the system without being dissolved."

A striking illustration of the effectiveness of capsule form medicine is given by Grip Fix, the remedy that relieves a cold in a night. This preparation contains Quinine, Salol, Caffein, Citrate, Cascara and Camphor Monobromate, the drugs usually used by physicians for colds or grippe. In capsule form they provide a reliable home treatment for colds which gives wonderfully quick results, just what is needed.

Have a box of Grip Fix in the house at this season when colds are all around. Get Reid's Grip Fix as there no substitute so effective or quick. On sale at all druggists at 35 cents per box.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed with Sulphur. It Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre at Once.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Vyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

TO GROW HAIR ON BALD HEADS

Specialist Gives Simple Recipe That Works Fine.

Thousands of people suffer from baldness, and falling hair who, having tried nearly every advertised hair tonic and hair-grower without results, have resigned themselves to baldness and its attendant discomfort. Yet their case is not hopeless; the following simple home prescription has made hair grow after years of baldness, and is also unequalled for restoring gray hair to its original color, stopping hair from falling out, and destroying the dandruff germ. It will not make the hair greasy, and can be put up by any druggist: Eryth, 6 ounces, Lavone, 6 ounces, 2 ounces, Menthol Crystals, one-half drachm. If you wish it perfumed add 1 drachm of your favorite perfume. This preparation is highly recommended by physicians as an absolute and is absolutely harmless as it contains none of the poisonous wood alcohol so frequently found in hair tonics. Ladies using this prescription should be careful not to get it on the face or where hair is not desired.

A woman preacher in England is reported as marrying a couple and kissing the bridegroom.
