

It Gay" After the Second Box of Iron-ox

January 6, 1903.
About a year ago, being a sufferer from indigestion (a bad tick), I bought two packages of Iron-ox. After taking one was conscious of an improvement, and I remember that the second one did the business, and I felt gay.

International Bible Lesson for Tomorrow—God's covenant with David—II Sam., vii, 16.

Golden Text—"Thy throne shall be established for ever."

The sacred Ark of God was once more in the holy place and all the emblematic worship of Jehovah, as ordained of God on Mount Sinai, again installed in a tabernacle within the Holy City. That David dwelt in a palace while God's Ark was under canvas, was God-d'honor and glory David's heart. He suggests to Nathan, the prophet, the building of a temple to the Most High. Nathan seconds his desire, but that same night God corrects their good intentions, revealing His own will and way. God begins by recounting His sojourn with Israel in the desert and is reminding David of his former humble position as shepherd, yet guided, preserved and chosen as ruler and king, given victory over his enemies and establishing the nation in peace. Then He covenants with David—as if to reward his good intention—that his throne would be established for ever. David was a man of war; Solomon, his son, was to be a man of peace—types of the church militant and the church triumphant. Solomon's reign was a type of the peaceful, universal reign of our Lord Jesus Christ. The scepter departed from Judah when (Shilo) Jesus came, but it remains in the hands of Him who triumphed over death and hell, entering into the glory as our Great High Priest, to come again as David's Greater Son—"a greater than Solomon is here"—and whose kingdom shall have no end. To have an endless kingdom we must have an eternal King, and for us to enjoy that glorious kingdom we must have eternal life, becoming heirs of God and joint heirs of Jesus Christ. Have we the wisdom to surrender to the One who died to redeem us and lives to forgive, receive and save us, giving us eternal life?

Why can't we come over to your house and play any more? Because papa gets so mad when we make a little bit of noise. What makes him that way? Mamma says it's dyspepsia makes him act so crazy. That's about the way it strikes the small boy. The dyspeptic has no idea of his own unreasonable or harshness. Little things are magnified and seem to justify his quick anger. There's health for the dyspeptic and happiness for the family by the use of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, and restores perfect health and strength, by enabling the perfect digestion and assimilation of food.

"I have taken one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for indigestion and liver complaint," writes Mr. C. M. Wilson, of Yankin College, Davidson Co., N. C. "I have had no bad spells since I commenced taking your medicine—in fact, have not felt like the same man. Before I took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' I could not eat anything without awful distress, but now I can eat anything I wish without having unpleasant feelings."

CHAPTER VI.
Madeline's Warning.

The next day, Madeline was well enough to sit up in a cosy little room adjoining her bedchamber.

There was, indeed, no reason why she should not have gone downstairs, but this she seemed strangely reluctant to do.

She looked even more beautiful than she had been before her illness.

Her paleness made her eyes seem larger and darker.

There was a softened, chastened look on her face, which became it well, and made Marjorie's heart go out towards her with added tenderness.

The two girls were alone together during the earlier part of the day.

Marjorie thought Madeline seemed sad, and wondered why.

In her heart she suspected that the sadness had some reference to Edgar Hyde.

"Marjorie, when did Mrs. Thornton say she should return to England?" asked Madeline, breaking a rather long silence, during which she had seemed sunk in painful thought.

"Mrs. Thornton was the lady who had engaged Marjorie as a companion."

"In a month from now."

"Marjorie, come here, I want you."

And, with an appealing gesture, she showed that she wished her to come and kneel beside her chair.

Marjorie obeyed with a tender smile. Madeline took the fair young face in both of her hands, and looked at it with a long, loving, wistful glance.

"Marjorie, I think you know I love you."

"So earnestly she spoke, with such a sad, gentle pathos, that involuntarily, the tears started to Marjorie's eyes."

"Yes, Madeline, I know that. How could I help knowing it?"

"And you love me?"

"I do—indeed I do."

"Then, if I ask you to do a very strange thing—what you must needs think strange—you will not misunderstand me? You will not doubt my love for you?"

"Dear Madeline, you know I should never do that."

And Marjorie pressed more closely to her friend.

"Well, Marjorie, I want to suggest something to you which I believe will be for your good and mine. As soon as Mrs. Thornton returns to England go to her."

Marjorie could not repress her surprise.

"And leave you?" she exclaimed, looking up at Madeline with startled, wide-open eyes.

"Yes, and leave me," replied Madeline, steadily, though in a tone of unutterable mournfulness. "Don't ask me the reason, Marjorie—only believe that I am acting for the best."

"What can be the reason?" thought Marjorie; and then a suspicion leapt into her mind which made her cheeks burn, and her eyes droop hurriedly beneath her friend's glance.

She remembered the unwelcome attention of Edgar Hyde; the admiration which she boldly in his glance whenever it fell on her.

Had Madeline got some knowledge of these things, even in the confinement of her bedchamber, and was this why she wanted her to go away?

Her suspicion was confirmed when, only a few minutes later, Madeline began to speak of him.

"I think you must have guessed what he is to me, Marjorie," she said, in a low voice, and glancing down at a magnificent diamond ring she wore on her finger.

"I have guessed you were engaged to him—yes."

"Marjorie, you don't know—you can't dream how I love that man!"

Madeline spoke with sudden energy. Her pale cheeks glowed.

She interlaced her fingers in a listless fashion, which showed plainly enough the agitation of her mind.

Marjorie knew not what to say.

BLOOD POISON
On account of its terrible effects, blood disease is called the king of all diseases. It may be either hereditary or contracted; so while it may not be a crime to have the disease, it is a crime to permit it to remain in the system. It may manifest itself in the form of Scrofula, Eczema, rheumatic pains, stiff or swollen joints, itches of the skin, eruptions or blotches, sores in the mouth or on the tongue, sore throat, falling out of hair, disordered stomach, and a general depression of the system. If you have any of these symptoms don't neglect yourself. You have the system. Beware of "old fory" treatment—beware of mineral poisons—beware of Quacks and Fakes. OUR NEW METHOD TREATMENT Our treatment is not injurious in any way, but reaches the very root of the disease and eliminates all poison from the system. The symptoms of disease gradually disappear. The blood becomes pure and enriched, the whole system is cleansed and purified, and the patient feels prepared anew for the duties and the pleasures of life. CURES GUARANTEED OR NO PAY. 25 Years in Detroit. 250,000 Cured.
