Law Says Telegraph Operators Must Have Shorter Hours

On March 1 next the law governing the hours of duty of all the telegraph operators throughout the United States will be put into operation. During the past years it has been the custom at the smaller railroad stations for operators to work twelve hours per day, but now the law says that eight hours shall constitute a day's work.

This means that where two operators are employed during the twenty-four hours three will be required, thus necessitating an extra operator at nearly every station in the country, estimated at nearly ten thousand. The demand for the telegraph operator will be something enormous and already the officials of the various railroads are straining every effort to be able to meet the conditions.

The high salaries of the operators and the exceptional short hours of duty make the trade one of the best paying propositions a young man or woman can follow.

It is now only a matter of five or six months before the law will be enforced, during which time it is possible for any person of ordinary ability to master the profession.

Our Day and Evening Classes make it possible for any person to attend the college and learn this trade, and to the young MAN OR WOMAN who is slaving their time away at hard and laborious work or who are dissatisfied with their present employment this is an excellent opportunity to better your condition before it is too late.

THE COLLEGE CLASS ROOMS ARE EQUIPPED WITH THE O.T.R. MAIN LINE WIRES, TOGETHER WITH THE USE OF ALL BLANKS AND FORMS USED IN THE REGULAR RAILROAD OFFICES, WHICH ENABLE US TO PREPARE OUR STUDENTS FOR SERVICE IMMEDIATELY UPON GRADUATION.

He Needs It

I have received two copies of The Farming World samples, and after reading them carefully, have concluded that I need the paper. Your article in last issue, "Echoes from the West," is worth very much more to me than a year or two's subscription. I am interested in ranching in Alberta, and your article deals wisely with this important branch of Canadian agriculture. Kindly send me The Farming World for one year.
