NOTICE.
 When a newspaper offers its advertising space at a nominal figure, it is a practical admission of "no circulation." THE KLONDIKE NUGGET asks a good figure for its space and in justification thereof guarantees to its advertisers a paid circulation five times that of any other paper published between Juneau and the North Pole.

SUNDAY, MAY 27, 1900.

(From Friday's Daily.) THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.

Dawson's celebration of the Queen's birthday, yesterday, was an occasion which will linger long in the memories of all who participated in its pleasures. In respect to weather, the day was all that could be desired. There was an apparent well laid system in the arrangements, which was sustained during the entire day. The various athletic events were announced and carried out with promptness, and the large crowds in attendance were skillfully and satisfactorily handled by Sergeant Wilson and his assistants, to whom is due much praise for so conducting affairs as to prevent any accidents occurring.

There was a total absence of rowdiness and similar disagreeable adjuncts of a day of celebration, which gave added pleasure to the day's festivities. There was a strong representation down from the creeks, all of which contributed their share of merrymakers. The good nature which seemed to pervade the crowd was infectious, and kept everyone in a good humor, despite the warmth of the afternoon sun. Altogether, Dawson quite sustained her reputation as a loyal town, and one which is always to do proper and fitting honor to such occasions as yesterday.

We doubt if many towns of the same size as Dawson observed her majesty's birthday with a more elaborate celebration than was held here.

COMMISSION REQUIRED.

The investigation now being conducted in the gold commissioner's office should be made the starting point for a most searching examination of the records of that department of the public service. The people of the Yukon territory, and, in fact, the people of Canada in general, will never be satisfied that the gold commissioner's office has been properly conducted, during the three years of its existence, until some properly constituted authority has gone into the history of the office and delivered an unbiased and unprejudiced judgment upon the methods which have prevailed in conducting its business.

Beyond the peradventure of a doubt, there has been an amount of crookedness within the office which would prove startling if the facts were known. This has become so firmly established in the public mind, by reason of matters which are of common knowledge, that demonstration of its truth is not required, although that might be easily accomplished.

In view of these circumstances, it appears strange that no effort should be made by those high in authority to sift the matter to the bottom and determine where to place the responsibility.

The so-called commission of investigation, held in Dawson more than a year ago, did not fulfill the objects for which it was ostensibly called into existence. Had it done so, there are cases now pending before the criminal court which, in all probability, would never have arisen.

A thoroughly good cleansing was what the commissioner's office then required, and what it still requires, in order that the administration of its business may be re-established in the confidence of the people. As long as guilt is shielded, and crime allowed to flourish without check, the invitation will remain open for constant repetition of just such offenses as are now being tried before the courts.

A thorough overhauling of the office, an expert examination into its books and records, and access given the public and press to all the latter, are all needed to place the office in the confidence of the people. The odium of the Fawcett regime has been handed down to the present day, and never will be removed until no further occasion remains for its existence. It will never be removed by suppression of facts from the public, nor by efforts at shielding wrong-doers from the results of their offenses.

A commission, with unlimited powers of investigation, is as much required today as ever.

The Yukon council should make a strong effort to induce the Ottawa government to divert a portion of the consolidated federal revenues for local uses in Dawson and on the neighboring creeks. Canada has had a prosperous year throughout the entire country, and a handsome surplus is now in the treasury. The Yukon territory's contribution to the Dominion coffers is far over and above what it costs to maintain it, and the difference, at the very least, should be sent back here for the purpose of improving roads and otherwise adding to the desirability of the country as a place of residence. A strong plea should go down to Ottawa this summer, with the above object in view.

Our contemporary, the News, which prides itself, above all things, upon the up-to-dateness of its news, published a long article, in a recent issue, concerning William Sylvester Taylor, of Kentucky, who, the News gravely assures us, has been nominated by the Republicans of that state for the office of governor. For the benefit of our contemporary's "extensive news-gathering service," we will say that Mr. Taylor was nominated in Kentucky, but that happened some six months ago, and he is now under indictment, charged with murdering his rival, Goebel. The News would do well to investigate its "exclusive telegraph franchises" a little. They seem to be somewhat out of order.

Tom Corwin's Ready Wit.

Gov. John Brough was once matched against Corwin and in his speech said: "Gentlemen, my honored opponent himself, while he preaches advocacy of home industry, has a carriage at home which he got in England; had it shipped across the water to him. How is that for supporting home industry and labor?"

When Corwin came to the stand, he made a great show of embarrassment. He stammered and began slowly:

"Well, gentlemen, you have heard what my friend Mr. Brough has to say about my carriage. I plead guilty to the charge, and I have only two things to say in my defense. The first is that the carriage came to me from an English ancestor as an heirloom, and I had to take it. Again, I have not used it for seven years, and it has been standing in my back yard all that time, and the chickens have converted it into a roost. Now, gentlemen," with a steady look at Brough. "I have nothing further to say in my defense, but I would like to know how Brough knows anything about my carriage if he has not been visiting my henroost!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Newspaper Advertising.

Frank Daniels made an experiment recently at Wallack's theater, New York city. Speaking of it, the comedian said:

"Between the acts ushers distributed among the audience slips with a brief printed statement politely asking the recipient to indicate by a check mark in the list of various advertising forms employed which one had attracted him to the performance—newspapers, billboards, window lithographs, or something else. The people seemed to take kindly to the idea, and the response was most liberal. Eleven hundred slips were handed to the ushers, and of that number 991 had been attracted by the newspapers solely."
