Stewart River Stampede,

The talk of the rich find on Stewar river has led to something of a stampede in that direction within the past day or two, although to judge from what is said of it this morning by those who are in the best position to know, the strike does not amount to much.

supposed to have been discovered is on Clear creek, a tributary of the Stewart entering that stream about 80 miles above its mouth. The discovery was staked by three Australians a week ago tomorrow, and something of the story which reached Dawson was published in the Nugget a day or two since. Frank Dooner has received word from Roseberg, who are now on the ground, this morning and says he believes from his information there is nothing there worth making the trip for.

Some seven or eight people started as leaving the creeks for the new strike, but inasmuch as those who have prospected the ground have returned here nervous and this had a tendency to and are not going back, it may be taken change betting slightly in the Kid's for granted that there is little excuse for a stampede.

The Confession Was Admitted as Evidence.

JUSTICE IS FINALLY DONE

In a Famous Criminal Case-Murderer Showed No Emotion at the Verdict.

The Sarga trial is at an end, and the jury has returned a verdict of manslaughter, and the judge has the sentence in reserve.

After taking the matter of the confes-sion into due consideration, Judge Craig decided to admit it in evidence, hence the verdict of manslaughter.

The confession of Sarga relates that he and Ballois had been working a lay together on the right limit of Bonansa creek for some time previous to the date of the killing, and that they had quarrelied several times, and once came to blows over a dispute arising out of his Sarga's) claim that Ballois owed him $100. The pay in the claim they were working pinched out and the partners decided to go up the Klondike and bring down a raft of wood to Dawson. They got the wood and while bringing it down the dispute again arose about the $100, and regarding the fight that ensued the confession says:

"Ballois at the time had a revolver 65 years of age and had resided here in his scabbard strapped to his side. He always carried a revolver.

"Ballois then swate at me, and said you still continue to say I am wrong, We quarrelled and Ballois made a move to draw his revolver. I picked up a stick that was laying in the wood pile near the fire and struck Ballois on the left side of the head above the ear, He did not fall, but wavered and seemed dizzy. He kept on pulling his gun and got it out of the scabberd, when I sprang forward and grabbed his hands and tried to take the revolver from him. He was a much stronger man than I so I caught his hand in my teeth and bit a piece out. He turned loose the revolver and I got it and jumped back. He started toward me and I was afraid he would get back the revolver, so I emptied the revolver into his body, shooting him six times. He fell dead."

The document goes on to state that the prisoner took from the body of the dead man the scabbard and bett, and after scooping out a shallow grave with his hands in the loose sand buried the hody, after which he jumped on the raft and came to town.

He states that it was his intention to give himself up to the police and tell his story, but became frightened and ended by joining the Nome stampede.
