FIRE LOCKOUTS

Watchmen to Be Kept on the Sum mits of Vermont Mountains.

mits of Vermont Mountains.

An act recently passed by the Vermont Legislature to help in the prevention of forest fires permitted the State forester to maintain a watchman during a danger season on any high bill or mountain watch was properly connected with the outside world with telephone. This is along the line of the system of lookogts maintained in New Hampshire, Maine and New York.

Last Summer a telephone was constructed by the State to the summit of Camels Hump and an arrangement was made with the Waterbury Club, which maintains a camp on the summit, to look out for fires. It is planned, says the Vermonter, to build a permanent shelter this year and maintain a trained watchman during dry seasons.

This is not only for the protection of the land which was given to the State by Cod. Battell, but to prevent fires in the neighboring towns which can be overlocked from the summit. A similar station will be equipped as soon as funds are available in the summit of Bromley Mount in the southern part of the State, a mountain which was given to the Etate by M. J. Hapgood.

Since the State cannot establish these stations on private holdings owners of timber lands have two methods of obtaining them. One of these is to donate to the State a hill or mountain overlooking a large part of their holdings, and it is doped that evenetually many owners of mountains for one reason or another will foliow the example of Mr. Hapgood and Col. Battell, and that a large portion of the Gren Mountain and equip it with a talephone. The State forester can then put in a watchman.

LET'S STUDY MERRIOPATHY.

Merriopathy is the science of the healing laugh. Merriopathy is better than homeopathy or allepathy for curing all the gloom diseases and grouch complaints that make life miserable. Some linesses need drugs, some need the surgeon's kinfe, some can be cured with a good laugh, some can be amiled away, but neither you nor I ever know of a sickness that was cured by a frown.

The wise physician well understands the therapeutic value of fun and a cheerful spirit. Medicine may be a necessary and powerful agent in the treatment of illness, but it may fall where fear and melancholy join hands with the disease. Laughter is one of the best medicines in the world, and lengthens life as well as brightens it. "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine," said the wise man, consequently we may employ it in many chromic cases without fear. Set, the gloomy, discouraged, nourastienic invalid to laughing. Study constantly how to provoke smiles. Cause a few thrills of humor to run, however weakly, through the velns and to tickle the risbles. The hostile forces of disease and worry and discouragement can be driven back by the benevolent microbes of mirth.—Christian Herald. LET'S STUDY MERRIOPATHY.

There are still some pretty good sized catfish in the Missouri River. Two fishermen took one from a net near the Handbal Eridge this morning that weighed 15 pounds, and was a scant inch short of five feet in length.

BODLEY'S LIBRARY.

The upper floor of Sir Thomas Bodley's great library was originally intended as a storehouse for books when the rest of the building should be full. It was decorated, partly through Bodley's request, and partly through the munificence of the university, with a row of some 222 heads, painted high up on the wall close under the ceiking, and grouped together as philosophers, poets, divine of physicians, according to the subjects for which their prototypes were famous. The library was opened in 1692, and three years later, writes Mrs. Reginald Poole, in her "Catalogue of Portraits in Oxford," the first portrait to be housed within its walls was presented by Thomas Earl of Dorset, Chancellor of the University, and was put up where it now stands. The bust of the founder, which was "carved to the life by an excellent hand in London," and intended for the "perpetual memory of him and his bounty to the public." Is the only portrait of Sir Thomas Bodley we possess, which was given in his lifetime. It was not till 1634, twenty ears after his death, that the university acquired the large canvas which displays the best known figure of him.—Form the London Globe.

COURT DRESS.

A Matter Full of Trouble for Men Presented to Royalty.

London-The question of the correct ostume to be worn at courts and levee s always a source of anxiety to those privileged to attend those functions. With women it is a more or less straightforward matter, and one that can safely be left to expert milliners and dressmakers, but with men it is far otherwise. The most frequent mistakes arise from the fact that there are two styles of court dress at present permit ted to the ordinary civilian, an old and

Both are of black velvet, but the old or dress is more elaborately ornament-ed with steel buttons, and there are lace frills and ruffles at the neck and wrists. The mistakes arise from at tempts to introduce some of these orns nents of the old court dress into the simpler form of the new.

Sometimes people in uniform come to court wearing the trousers prescribed for a levee instead of the breeches ne-cessary for cour tdress. If there is time the Lord Chamberlain's officials occasionally insist on their going home to rectify such mistakes, but as there is no need at courts for many of the men to enter the presence at all they are often allowed to pass with the warning to keep in the background as much a possible.

The court dress of a private gentle man costs from $145 to $240, according to the elaboration of the steelwork in the buttons and sword hilt. The details of the expense are as follows: Black velvet coat, $50.40. Steel buttons, $9.60 to $25.20. Black velvet breeches, $20 to White satin waistcoat, $10.10 to Cocked hat, $12 to $18. Knee and shoe buckles,, $4.80 to Sword, $16.80 to $75.60.

Members of the royal household need bout $1,448 worth of uniforms. The regulations of the Lord Chamber lain's department for the dress of those who attend courts or levees are so strict that an expert court tailor is posted at the entrance of the rooms in which the functions are held. It is his duty to scrutinize the clothes of each attending the court and to draw attention to any irregularity.

SAVINGS FROM SMALL WAGES.

How Some English Workingme Have Made Small Fortunes.

What self-help and thrift can do for a man is strikingly demonstrated by the case of John Morrison, a Yorkshire car penter, who, although his wages had never exceeded $8.75 a week, has been able to leave behind him the substantial sum of $15,000, every penny of it the fruits of saving.

When he married, a little over forty years ago, he looked round to see what economies he could effect. He found economies he could effect. He found that he had been spending at least $1.25 a week on beer and tobacco; these he could very well dispense with. That meant a saving of $65 a year. And this was the nucleus of his fortune.

A few weeks later his wages were niced from $7.70 to $8.75 weekly. He raised from $7.50 to $8.75 weekly. He could rub along without the extra $1.25, and was thus able to put by $130 a year. When his savings had amounted to $500 he bought two cottages, borrowing three-quarters of the purchase money and paying off the loan out of the rents. He was a man of property now. The appetite for thrift took full possession of him. He was fond of garden-ing and he decided to turn his hobby and his spare time into money. He rented half an acre of land; his wife opened a shop for the sale of the produce, and the first year he was able to increase his saving to $5 a week, with which, in two years' time, he was able to buy two more houses. And thus simply his fortune grew. House was added to house, each paying for its own purchase with its rent at 60 he was aide to retire on $750 year, almost twice his highest wages at workman, and when he died to leave a good $15,000 behind him. And what John Morrison could do and did, others have done. Only a few week ago a workingman confessed in a cour-of law that he had already saved $3,600 of law that he had already saved $5,000 out of wages, which had never exceeded $7.50 a week. How did you do it?" asked the magistrate. "By a little self denial, your worship," the man answer ed, and then proudly added: "And I've brought up four children, too; and now there's only me and the wife, I'm going to buy an annuity with it, which they say will come to over $359 a year.'

How many of the readers of this paper can tell what the Italians and Turks are fighting about? Here is a war that has now been going on for over two-thirds of a year, in which many lives have been lost and much property destroyed, bringing privation and suffering to thousands and seriously crippling trade and com-merce, and it is a safe bet that not one in ten intelligent persons whom you might meet on the street could tell you what it is about.

The world has almost forgotten it Here at home we are more interested in the revolt in Mexico, the little insurrection in Cuba, the political situation
