He looked just as pig headed as he turned out to be. There was no doubt about his being a stranger in a strange land, for while his clothes were not rustic in appearance there was an unfamiliar cut about them. And then he carried a traveling bag and wore spats.

When the conductor of the Fourth averages alled to his fore the stranger.

aue car called for his fare, the stranget dug down into his pocket and drew out a bill. The man in blue, who bore on his right sleeve three gold service stripes as proof of wonderful forbearance with all kinds and conditions of people, squinted at the bill and shook his head.

"That ain't no good in this country," Good smart boy wanted, apply at T. H. Taylor & Co. 10t "Of course it's good," said the stranger, still sticking it forth. "It's a Canadian F.W. Knott, Park street, is laid up with blood poisoning in his hand.

"Can't take it," repeated the con ductor. "They won't take it off me at the office."

"Well, you've got to take it," said the stranger, "or stop the car and put me off.

It's money and good money."

The conductor acted like a human being. He took the bill and looked it all ever again. Then he referred it to a

"I never saw a bill like that before," he said. "What do you think of it?"

The passenger told him that he was right in not accepting it because it was not a legal tender in this country and because he could not get rid of it except at a discount even at a bank. So the conductor passed it over to its owner once

"You're in America now," he said good naturedly. "You'll have to pay American money. If I took that, I'd be stuck with it myself. Workmen are engaged removing Still the passenger was pig headed.

"Well," he said, "you'll have to stop the car and put me off. That's all."
Then he settled back doggedly and scowled. The controversy had attracted great attention in the car. Every one was looking at the stranger, and a man who sat across from him, thinking that the $5 bill was all the stranger had, gave the conductor a nickel for the fare, and the other passengers took it for and the other passengers took it for granted that the controversy was all set-

But not so. The pig headed young man arose with a grunt and again dug into his trousers pocket. This time he pulled out several American $1 bills. One of these he offered to the conductor.

Companies A and C will meet this evening for drill, commencing at 7.30.

To-morrow evening company D will drill and the band will meet for "I got your fare," said the conductor.
"No, you haven't," insisted the stranger. "I haven't paid."
"But this man paid for you."
"He's not me. Change the bill."

"I ain't got the change," insisted the The man with the spats was getting red man who had paid his fare. The man

But the stranger would not. He went from passenger to passenger, asking for change, poking his $1 bill into their bash railways will continue every faces. They all thought it was Canadian and examined it closely, while the stranger rocked around the car.

At the end of the line he found a man who could give him four quarters for the bill. He offered a quarter to the man who had paid his fare. The man would not take it. Then the stranger started

At last he got five nickels. He gave one of them to his benefactor, drew a deep breath and sat himself down again. glaring at every one. After two minutes' thought he remarked:

"I'm pretty pig headed when I get started." No one in the car undertook to deny this assertion.

their little daughter's mind the names the days of the week a few days ago. To facilitate their work they repeat over and over again the rhyme beginning, "Solomon Grundy was born or Sunday." The little tot was finally able to repeat it fairly well. The more difficult part of the lesson then came.
"Now," said her father, "what day was yesterday?" "Sunday," came the quick response. "What day is today?"

"Monday, I dess," came the more uncertain reply.

"Well, what day is tomorrow?" There was no hesitancy here. "It's washday," triumphantly replied the lit-

Saturday-to-Monday House Farty Non The Saturday-to-Monday house party

now the correct thing among out-oftown hostesses, and surely no joiller form of entertainment than this has yet been devised. Whether simple or elaborate preparations are made dependent, of course up on the size of the establishment and the number of servants, but, whatever else it may or may not be, the house party should be distinctly informal.

The note of invitation for a Saturday-to-Monday party should be explicit is to trains, etc., and should also state whether guests will be met at trains by conveyances; arrives at the house, afternoon tea is served, English fashion, and then, if the gathering is a large one the ladies retire to their rooms and do not return until five minutes before the dinner hour. Again, English fashion, dinner is the only ceremonious meal, but even there dress is comparatively simple, the women wearing pretty demi-toilettes and the men dinner packets instead of the regulation dress coats.

At many out-of-town houses Sunday morning breakfast parties are much affected, the house party being supplemented by outsiders, who arrive on wheels, afoot, or horseback, as inclination dictates. These meetings are, of course, delightfully informal, and the breakfast served is really what the French call a dejeuner a la fourchette-that is to say, a judicious compromise between the morning meal and the midday luncheon. Grape fruit, it goes without, saying is the first choice; a golden o elet follows next; then the piece de resistance—a bird or broiled chicken—with potatoes done in some delicate style; waffles them, or hot cakes, and last of all, delicious strawberries, served with rich country

Many hostesses, who rejoice in large country house, where the hall is the special architectural feature, have breakfast served at small tables set in the hall, the hall itself lavishly decorated a la rose tree; that is to say, with trailing vines on walls, and mantel, and doors, and the effect is charming What to wear at such a gathering is, of course, the question that arises first in the feminine mind when an invitation is received for a Saturday-to-Monday party. The answer to that problem is easy: In compliment to your hostess, put your prettiest and dressiest gown in a dress suit case, add to its contents a duck skirt, a crisp shirt waist, and the small toilette accessories and even the most fastidious woman is suitably equipped for such a stay. A neat tailor gown is worn on the train, or if one travels awheel, then the dress suit case is sent ahead and the bicycle costume is made as chic and trim as possible.

What Girls are Doing. Another thing the girls are doing is making small hair pillows to send to send to the men. These were suggested to them by an old regular army officer who has seen much service, and who told them that a man could make himself quite comfortable anywhere in the open with his blanket if he only had a hair pillow to lay his head on. These pillows are not stuffed very full, so that they may be easily rolled up ty-seven inches square and are covered first with ticking, and then with a slip cover of denim or cretone, which can be taken off and washed. Some of the girls are embroidering dark blue ones in red initials and monograms, brown ones in yellow or blue, and so on, in different combination of color. There is a certain set of well known society girls in town who are buying luxuries and packing cases of them for the men they know in the different camps. Each girl has pledged herself to give so much money every week, and a committee on packing and shipping the cases has been formed, which will attend to the sending of them off every two weeks until the war is over. The goods are all to be sent toone of the girls' houses, which will be kept open all summer if the family goes away, and any donations of sensible and practical articles of food which are easily transported are very gratefully receivnd .- Harper's Bazar.

How to Climb Stairs. 'A physician who declares that very few people know how to walk upstairs properly gives these instructions; "Usually a person will tread on the ball of his foot in taking each step. This is very tiresome and wearing on the mus-cles, as it throws the entire suspended weight of the body on the muscles of the legs and feet. You should, in walking or climbing stairs, seek for the most equal distribution of the body's weight possible. In walking upstairs your feet should be placed squarely down on the step, heel and all, and then the work should be performed slowly and deliberately. In this way there is no strain upon any muscle, but each one is doing its duty in a natural manner. The man who goes upstairs with a spring you may be sure is no philosopher, or, at least, his reasoning has not been directed to that subject." The doctor might have gone a little further in the same line and protested against the habit which many persons have of bending over half dou-ble when they ascend a flight of stairs, In exertion of this kind, when the heart is naturally excited to more rapid ac tion, it is desirable that the lungs should have full play. But the crouching position interferes with their ac-tion, the blood is imperfectly aerated and there is trouble right away. Give the lungs a chance to do their work ev-

The Greatest Chef in Europe. The Emperor of Russia, it is said, has given his confidence to an extraordi-nary degree to his Alsatian chef who has presided over the preparations for imperial repasts during the last five years. This important individual ranks as Captain in the navy and Colonel in the army, and on state occas-ions appears in gorgeous uniform, his breast covered with Russian and for-eign orders. As chef, he has 1,200 subordinates. When the Czar dines alone the table is simple, but the chef is always ready to prepare a glorious feast for several thousand people.
