DIRECTIONS FOR MAKING BREAD:

To one quart of milk or water add two-thirds of a teaspoonful of yeast; add flour to the thickness of batter, and let it rise over night; then add four enough to knead softly twenty minutes, or until it will not cling to the board, as it requires much more kneading than Winter Wheat Flour. Let it rise in the pan, then make into small loaves, and let it rise again. Bake in a moderate oven. Be sure and not let it stand in the oven after it is done, and we will promise you a most beautiful, sweet, white bread. This flour will work very much better by thoroughly drying it out. Let it set on the back of the stove, or some other warm place, twenty-four hours, and you will be surprised at the difference it will make in either bread or cake. Some good cooks keep a lot of dried out flour on hand all the time and regard it a great secret.

DIRECTIONS FOR MAKING THE BEST YEAST:

Boil a handful of hops in two quarts of water ten minutes. Then strain, and to the liquor add six good-sized grated potatoes, one cup of sugar and one tablespoonful of salt. Let it simmer one half hour; when lukewarm add one cup of good yeast, and let it rise.
