

David Lloyd-George's War Speech, July 21.

London newspapers arriving in Montreal on Saturday give a greater length than the earlier cable accounts the speech of Chancellor Lloyd George, delivered at the Mansion House, July 21, which played so strong a part in the recent discussion over the Franco-German Moroccan question. In his speech Mr. Lloyd George spent some time over the revenue of the country and spoke with enthusiasm of the era of trade revival and general prosperity which England is now enjoying. He said there was no immediate prospect of a recession in the tide.

The world, he said, was growing richer; its store was increasing. No country in the world had as great an interest in the prosperity of other countries as we had. We were the bankers of the world, the carriers of the world, the brokers of the world. We sold more of our manufactures to the world than any other country. We had a paramount interest in the general prosperity of all countries in the world. Anything that conduces to the world's prosperity was to our interest; anything that impaired it was chiefly our loss. There was only one circumstance that could possibly interfere at this moment with the continued flow of that stream of prosperity, whose fertilizing influence was spreading over the whole world, and that circumstance would be anything that would disturb international peace.

"Peace," Mr. Lloyd George continued, "is the first condition of continued prosperity. Fortunately, there is no reason to fear that such a catastrophe as war is imminent, although there are, of course, constant questions that arise between Governments which produce discussion, and sometimes irritation. But the common sense of nations has of late years generally in the end intervened to secure a peaceable solution. Personally I am a sincere advocate of all means which would lead to the settlement of international disputes such as those which civilization has so successfully set up for the adjustment of differences between individuals, and I rejoice from my heart at the present time at the prospect of a happy issue to Sir Edward Grey's negotiations with the United States of America for the reference of disputes which may occur in future between ourselves and our kinsmen across the Atlantic to some more merciful, rational and just arbitration than that of the sword."

"But I am also bound to say that, that I believe it is essential in the highest interests, not merely of this country, but of the world, that Britain should at all hazards maintain her place and her prestige amongst the great Powers. (Applause.) Her potent influence has, many a time in the past, and may yet be in the future, invaluable to the cause of human liberty. It has more than once in the past redeemed Continental nations—who are sometimes apt to forget that service—from overwhelming disaster, and even national extinction."

"I would make great sacrifices to preserve peace. I conceive that nothing would justify a disturbance of international goodwill, except questions of the gravest national moment. "But if a situation were to be forced upon us in which peace could only be preserved by the surrender of the great and beneficent position Britain has won by centuries of heroism and achievement, by allowing Britain to be treated where her interests were vitally affected, as if she were of no account in the cabinet of nations, then I say emphatically that peace at that price would be a humiliation, intolerable for a great country like ourselves to endure. (Applause.) "National honor is no party question. (Hear, hear.) The security of our great international trade is no party question. The peace of the world is much more likely to be secured if all nations realize fairly what the conditions of peace must be, and it is because I have a conviction that nations are beginning to understand one another better, to appreciate each other's point of view more thoroughly, to be more ready to discuss calmly and dispassionately their differences, that I feel sure that nothing will happen between now and next year which will render it difficult for a Chancellor of the Exchequer in this place to respond to the toast proposed by you, my Lord Mayor—the toast of 'The Prosperity of the Public Purse.'—Montreal Star, Aug. 2nd.

Garden Party.

Rev. Father McCarthy's Garden Party promises to be the event of the season in Carbonear. THE PEOPLE'S PAPER.

The Evening Telegram
THE BEST ADVERTISING MEDIUM IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

The paper that goes into the homes of all the people must of necessity have a great influence; and that is where the EVENING TELEGRAM scores its strongest point—it influences the home—and the person who uses its columns for advertising purposes secures a wider field of publicity than can be obtained through any other newspaper in Newfoundland.

Petticoats in natural colored pongee, with printed bands in color on the edges, are used for linen suits, hose and blue are the favorite shades for the decoration.

This is the first season that material of all weaves, whether silk, cotton or wool, have been combined, and the effect has been one of artistic merit.

Very thick rouleaux of satin finish the waists of one-piece dresses and are twisted and arranged as ornaments at the top of the back panel, usually fastened at the side.

Publicity to Treaties.

Special Evening Telegram.
WASHINGTON, To-Day.
The Senate has adopted the unusual course of making public the text of four treaties which have not yet received sanction at its hands. These are the Anglo-American and the Franco-American general arbitration treaties and the treaties providing for the adjustment of the finances and the customs of Honduras and Nicaragua. Publicity is given these important conventions at the request of the Administration which desires their subject matter shall receive the fullest consideration by the press and the people in order to enlighten the Senate as to the real sentiment of the country as a basis for their action.

The Home Dressmaker should keep a Catalogue Scrap Book of our Pattern Cuts. These will be found very useful to refer to from time to time.

9004.—LADIES' PRINCESS SLIP.

A Desirable Petticoat Slip. With the vogue of semi-transparent dress fabrics, it becomes almost imperative to wear a slip or Princess petticoat underneath. It may be of silk, satin, nainsook, longcloth or sateen. It takes the place of both corset cover and underskirt. The design is simple and can be developed at home at about half the cost of a ready made slip. The pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. It requires 8 yards of 3/4 inch material for the 36 inch size. A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

Suitable materials for any of these patterns can be procured from ATRE & SONS, Ltd. Samples on request. Attention pattern number. Mail orders promptly attended to.

8992.—A SIMPLE HOUSE OR WORK DRESS.

Ladies' House or Work Dress in Princess Style, With or Without Pocket.

Pink and white checked dimity was chosen for this dress model. The spacious pockets will be found a great convenience. Gingham, percale, lawn or chambray may be used for this model, which will develop nicely without the pockets for a dainty afternoon gown. The Pattern is cut in 6 sizes: 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. It requires 4 1/2 yards of 44 inch material for the 36 inch size. A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.
