Memorial for Heroic Dead.

The Prince of Wales has brought back with him from the Antipodes a very beautiful conception of a form of memorial for the soldiers who have fallen in the great war.

He approached Ballarat, the great gold mining city in the Australian colony of Victoria, by means of a broad avenue, some fifteen miles long, lined on either side by trees, which are flourishing, and that bid ere long to form a sort of foliage domed roof for the entire thoroughfare.

Each tree planted within the last three or four years, and there are about five thousand of them, commemorates a Ballarat boy who gave his life for the empire at the front in France, on the peninsula of Gallipoli and in Palestine. Each of the trees bears the name of the soldier whose supreme sacrifice it is designed to recall to his kith and kin at Ballarat.

Mere human art, no matter how great the genius of the artificer, cannot begin to compare with the art of nature. There is something appealing in the latter which renders it far superior to anything of the kind in stone or metal or on canvas.

Boycotting British Goods

Chicago, Nov. 29.--The latest thing in picketing or pickarding by Sinn Féin sympathizers took place here last night when a party of them made up of men and women, blocked State street with signs advising a boycott of British goods. No attempts was made by the police department to stop this new form of anti-British manifestation.

Some of the placards read: "Buy nothing made in England." "The blockade is England's weapon. The boycott is our answer." "Buy nothing in England until Ireland is made free."

The resolution to boycott England was passed on November 21 by the Friends of the Irish Republic, and a committee headed by M. J. Flannery was appointed to list British goods.
