CHAPTER IV.

CHAPTER IV. There was once upon a time a certain philosopher who, by the mere exercise of his will, could die whenever he pleas-ed; could put himself into a state of trance, during which his soul, like all living souls, retained his own individual-ity, but wandered at large into infinite space and infinite time, where there are no 'special conditions of life and energy; where there are no parts or atoms, but where there are no parts or atoms, but all things are merged in one vast whole. We realize much the same kind of sen-sations whenever we enter the great city of all great cities.

of all great cities. In every other place we live. Every other spot of earth has an individuality of its own; and when we are in any other spot than this, we also have ours, consciously felt by ourselves and recog-nized by those about us. Every other place is a place of traffic, of pleasure, of history, of study, of torpor, or of some one of a hundred other things, as the case may be; and every inhabitant of it is more or less in keeping with its of it is more or less in keeping with its characteristic quality in an understood and appreciated degree—in a word, can feel himself, and feel and be felt by others so as to have a separate exist-ence from the mass. But London has, of all places in the world, the power of absorbing existences, and of merging them in its own. It is more a city of pleasure even than Paris; more of traf-fic than New York; more of history than Rome; more of study than Oxford; more of torpor than Denethorp. And it is all this, and the opposite of all this, and a great deal else besides, at one and the same time. No one can possibly feel his own individual existence. On entering same time. No one can possibly feel his own individual existence. On entering the universal city he is lost in the whole, like a rain-drop in the sea; like the soul of Hermotimus in the soul of the uniof Hermotimus in the soul of the uni-verse itself. Doubtless it is a glorious sensation. even though it may considerably dimin-ish our self-conceit, to quit the small for the great; to exchange our own narrow bodles for the vast body of humanity it-self. But it is not quite so glarious a sensation when this vast body, as multi-form in its aspects as Proteus himself, chooses to assume to us its most evil guise; when it wears the aspect of in-finite hunger and of infinite cold. Then guise; when it wears the aspect of in finite hunger and of infinite cold. Then a man would fain still farther imitate the philosopher in question by recovering once more his separate, his individual life, however narrow and confined it might be, and however miscrable; for it is better to feel, if starve one must, that one at least starves as a man, and not Is better to feed, it starve one migst, that one at least starves as a man, and not as a mere atom of a vast starving ma-chine. It need scarcely be said that Felix was not among those to whom a return to his old life was possible. He had chosen to follow his fate to London, and now he must drain whatever cup he might find there, whether of gold or of gall, and whether he chose or no. Certainly luck had so far been against him, for his present position could not be called altogether the result of impru-dence. Had the theater not been burned, he, with his few wants and solitary manner of existence, could have lived on as well, in a pecuniary sense, as he had lived in Paris, and have dreamed of future fame; and thought of Angelique as well here as there. As time went on, too, his position would doubles have im-proved, for he was really a skillful and promising musician; and if merit sel-dom "succeeds" by its own force, it sel-dom altogether fails. But now he was, by the destruction of the house at which he was engaged, entirely thrown out of work; for engagements are by no means he was engaged, entirely thrown out of work; for engagements are by no means so plentiful as those who require themto plentiful as those who require them-at least, they were not so in those days, whatever the case may be now. Besides, he had, of course, long since spent the small sum of money that he had brought with him from Paris. He had saved nothing; he had lost his violin, and he had made no friends who could be of one essistance to him any assistance to him. Of course there war Of course, there were many worse of than he. He was not burdened with a wife and a dozen children; he was not infeeble health: he was not seventy years old. Surely, he thought to himself that night, as hundreds and thousands of young, healthy and unburdened men have thought before him, there must be some way of getting a living, even if in order to do so he should have to desert his profession for a while; and before he fell asleep, as he did, and soundly, he had come to grieve for his violin, not as for a good instrument, but as for a dear friend; for its own sake, that is, far more than for the daily bread which which it represented. None but the ar-tist can tell how dear to the heart-that mysterious thing called a musical instru-ment may be which use and association have endowed with what seems like sym-pathetic life; with a soul made up of all the fancies and all the passions and all the thoughts with which its strings have trembled since it first was made to speak. But there is consolation in thinking that a not inglorious death has saved what we love from danger of desecration; whatever might prove to be the fate of the master, the soul which his hands had made was safe among the stars. And, now that he was put to it, and with this thought for a consolation, after all, he came to think also, there are many worse hindrances in the way of winning nothing to lose. Must not the man in-evitably conquer who has to choose be-tween victory and death? With Ange-lique true to him, what would he not do? Love and the instinct of self-preservation—the poetry and the prose of life—came to his ald, and filed him with the full courage which is the last thing that a man should lose. Nor did the morning bring about a reaction. But, alas! courage, youth, health and independence are not, talismans. Even they, united, cannot without external ald obtain employment at a day's notice; or, very offen, for a great many days. And then Felix had disadvantages. He young, healthy and unburdened men have Guelph, Ont., Feb. 19.—The annual competition of the Royal City Curing Club commenced yesterday afternoon, 31 rinks reporting. Exeter, Ont., Feb. 19.—A very fast and exciting game of hockey was play-ed here last night between the St. John's A. C. of London and the Devons of Exeter, the score being 6 to 2 in favor of the Devons. DUTTON WON.

DUTTON WON. Dutton, Ont., Feb. 19.—In a fast and clean game of hockey last evening, Boxall was defeated by the home team by a score of 8 to 3. At times both goalkeepers were suspended for having knees on ice. Dutton will in all prob-ability play at Rodney tonight. SOUTHAM'S TEAM WON.

On Saturday afternoon, for the third time in three weeks, teams representing the Southam Printing and Litho. Com-pany and the London Printing and Litho. Company, met together in a game of hockey on Jubilee Rink, and as before, the Southam team showed their superior-ity by winning by a score of 4 to 3. Much rivalry exists between these two firms in sporting matters, and an exciting con-test was witnessed. C. Turner for the Southam team, played a very strong game, while the defense of the L. P. and L. goal by Short and T. Jenkins was exceptionally good. The score at half time stood 2 to 1 in favor of L. P. and L., but their opponents scored three goals On Saturday afternoon, for the third time stood 2 to 1 in favor of L. P. and L., but their opponents scored three goals to their one in the next half. The two previous games resulted in a victory for Southam's, and a tie, the scores being 4-0 and 1-1 respectively. The players were: S. P. and L.-Goal, Pelne; cover, Smith: point, Hodges; forwards, Turner, Edy, Bonsor, McIntosh. L. P. and L.-Goal, Jenkins; cover, Short; forwards, Gidley, Laing, Davis, McGuire.
