THE HORSE'S PRAYER.

Pathetical and ironical as it may seem, the horse looks up to man as his god. In the Swedish they have a 'Prayer of the Horse," addressed to his human lord and master, which in sum is as follows:

"O lord, my master, I thank and adore you for the kind word you ing pleasant for all concerned. spoke to me long ago, and I strive in the hope that you will pet me once in If I cannot understand what you wish me to do, please be patient and show me. Don't beat me or jerk on the reins, but look and see if something is not wrong with the harness. "I beg of you not to whip me going up hill, nor give me loads heavier than I can pull. Keep me shod, so that I can get a foothold, and don't let the farrier cripple my feet. If I am sick or have an ulcerated tooth, go easy with me for a day, as I am beside myself with pain. "Oh, grant me cool, clean water in the hot weather, and let me not eat my fodder dry.

"Finally, when my strength is gone, and I cannot any more work for you enough to be worth my keep, I beseech of you, don't let me be sold to drag a vender's cart, but take my life in the quickest and easiest way, and God will reward vou in this life and in heaven.

One of the objects of interest in Lua sadder if wiser man when he learns to suffer the same way.

Twenty-five years ago thirty-two storks' nests could be seen on the high buildings of Colmar. This year there are only five nests occupied. It may be observed that the nests occupied of the peet observed that the nucleus of the nest is provided by the town in the form of a kind of iron basket. The birds do their own furnishing, which to begin with consists of dry leaves, but the storks are collectors of curiosities. After the nests have served their purcloth caps, old stockings, buttons, handkerchiefs, etc. The explanation of It is thought that they were drowne, the birds forsaking the town is that marshes disappear before the Itenance from marsh lands. For many years past everywhere seen by visitors to the palace en-She has passed middle age and is a sconsed in the most comfortable armfragile, slender little person, with a chair in the king's study, and a warnsweet, kindly face and a sympathetic ing growl or a friendly wag of the tail indicated the exact relationship which visitors might be permitted to take up "As I have been engaged in it several ed chairs had no terrors for Caesar. At longer than a few minutes, he would sit up and beg or give his master a the fresh course on the menu. When the king went on a railway journey Caesar always occupied the royal saloon, and sat on or near to the assortment of newspapers and books until his majesty was seated. And then he would make an exceedingly demonstrative fuss. As became a dog in his position, he had a boy to look after him, and genplayed an exclusiveness toward other dogs which was really highly com-mendable. On the Riviera recently, however, he interpreted the laxity of royal holidays rather too freely, and threatened to demolish, for no apparent reason, a French poodle nearly twice his size. That was the only blot on his 'scutcheon.-London Telegraph.

RURAL DELIVERY IN THE SOUTH.

Throughout the mountain districts of the south the mail is carried on horse back. The pouch is about five feet 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. are usually my long, divided in two sections and opens in the middle. Half the mail is put in each side of the sack, and in this way it is carried on the horse's back. In the rough mountain sections the work is anything but easy. Where there are no roads it is hard to work, riding through storms, fording streams climbing steep and rocky trails with almost perpendicular cliffs above and below. One misstep means death to horse and rider on the rocks below. The postmaster is notified to have the mail ready by the tooting of the horn which every mail carrier carries. He blows the horn before he gets to the postoffice as a signal to be ready for him, so that there will be no delay in making his trip on time.-Fur News
