JOHNSTON—JOHNSTON.

Special to The Advertiser.
Bothwell, Sept. 13.—A quiet but pretty wedding of two popular young people was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Johnston, when their eldest daughter, Rose, became the bride of Melvin Johnston.

At high noon the bridal couple entered the prettily decorated drawing-room and took their places under an arch of pale pink asters and evergreens. The pastor of the Anglican Church, Rev. Hunt, performed the ceremony in the presence of only immediate friends and relatives.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and wore a lovely gown of pale yellow French voile, and carried pale pink roses. She wore the groom's gift, a rope of pearls.

The wedding was extremely quiet, owing to the recent death of the groom's father, Councillor John Johnston.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnston will reside in Windsor.

Cameron, the president, presided over the first of the meeting, after which Mrs. A. Merrill, who is convener of the September circle, took charge. The subject for the month was "Grand Ligne." ASK YOUR NEIGHBORS.
There is hardly a neighborhood in the country where women cannot be found who have derived benefit from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For nearly fifty years this botanical medicine has been over-coming some of the worst forms of female ills. As one woman has been benefited by its use, she has told others, who have used it with the same good results. This great medicine has spread from shore to shore by the recommendation of those who have found it good. Therefore, ask your neighbor. Let her tell you from experience the benefit which all women derive from its use.—Advt.

More About Cyclamens.

Dear Miss Grey,—It happens that I have a clipping from The Farmer's Advocate on the care of cyclamen bulbs, which I am glad to pass on to June. I, too, had a beauty which bloomed from the time I got it for Christmas till late in the spring. So I was glad to know what to do with the source of so much joy to me.

Am still "shut-in," so I can heartily endorse all that Traveler said some time ago about "The Guide Post," and I, too, if I were to tell the ten books I enjoyed most, would include "The Other Wise Man." It is one of the collection of Van Dusen's stories in "The Blue Flower," which is one of the five of his books I am happy to own. I cannot tell you how much I enjoy them, and it is particularly "The Guide Post" articles and keep them close at hand, that I may often go over them.

Hoping to see the Mail-Box full, soon.

I have already printed some information about the cyclamen. Violet, I thought, I would let the readers have the benefit of your little article. The cyclamen is such a favorite that I am sure the Boxites will be glad to know everything possible about it. I believe "The Guide Post" articles are beloved of a great many Mail-Box readers. What a pity, you are still missing.

Perhaps you will find an opportunity to write and tell us more of the books you like. It would pass the time for you, and I am sure Cynthia Grey would be glad of another letter from you.

The best thing for the cyclamen plants at this time is to dry them off gradually, and in about two months' time shake the bulbs from the present soil and place them in new soil, composed of three parts of peat moss, two parts of well-rotted manure, two parts of leaf mold, or, in other words, a fairly rich compost with a little sand added. The long tight growing inside until cold weather has passed, then the plants may be placed on a veranda where there is partial shade. As the plants gradually, should take place, beginning with a four-inch pot—not more. As the cold weather approaches these plants may be placed in a warm light room. With proper care and attention, these plants should flower about Christmas time. Prior to placing the bulbs in new soil, they may be placed in soapy water for a few minutes. The foliage of the cyclamen during the growing season should be kept moist as far as possible.

A Visit From Ann.
Dear Miss Grey,—I have been glad to see a few letters in the Mail-Box lately. Let us hear from others. I wonder if any of the Mail-Boxers have any peony roots they would exchange for seeds or gladiolus bulbs? I would like white and pink with cream centre. I have red, but like others, I see that September and October are the right months in which to plant them. ANN.

I will be glad to forward Ann's address to anyone wishing to exchange. I am very sorry that I haven't this recipe in the Mail-Box. Can one of the readers supply it? Thanks for your note, O-Bee-Cee-Te. Our fund is rapidly nearing the end.

Using Grape Leaves.
Dear Miss Grey, An inclosing stamped envelope, and would like you to send me, if you have it on file, the recipe for dill pickles—the one in which grape leaves are used. One in which grape leaves are used. I have included in the S. C. H. fund. Mite included is for the S. C. H. fund. I am very sorry that I haven't this recipe in the Mail-Box. Can one of the readers supply it? Thanks for your note, O-Bee-Cee-Te. Our fund is rapidly nearing the end.

Wants To Be Nurse.
Dear Cynthia and Pageites,—Don't you really wish you were many miles away from your stuffy office taking a cooling dip in the lake, instead of answering hundreds of questions? But will you please answer one for me, as I would very much like to know. I want to study to be a nurse and at most hospitals you have to have one year's high school training or its equivalent. Wishing you or the pageites every success. SWEET PEA.

All the Way From the Prairies.
Dear Miss Grey and Readers,—It is a long time since I've had a chance to read the letters in the Mail-Box. But will you please answer one for me, as I would very much like to know. I want to study to be a nurse and at most hospitals you have to have one year's high school training or its equivalent. Wishing you or the pageites every success. SWEET PEA.

been my meat and drink. Get into it and dig for your life.

As the door shut behind him, the woman walked to the bookcase, reached behind a pile of books and then held up a worn volume. She turned the pages slowly, searching. "Peace I give unto you," she read. "Not as the world gives peace, but as I give it. Not your heart be troubled."

She sank into a chair, still reading. Darkness came and she reached, groping for the light. Her face had lost its anxious look. The lines about the mouth were softened as she came across passage after passage, deeply underscored. "This is where Mother got her help," she said to herself softly.

"The Boxites will enjoy your letter, Author. Are we to expect another one seen telling of your trip in the mountains? I shall be looking forward to it."

A Beauty Hint.
Dear Miss Grey,—Having read anything on this subject, and thinking it might benefit someone, I volunteer the following:
To remove a fine growth of hair from arms or face, rub it gently with a handful of pumice stone until it is removed from surface, which will take in most cases about a minute. Then apply a fairly strong solution of household ammonia. When dry apply peroxide. Try this daily, then miss an occasional one and see the result.
