

Miss Helen Wills receiving the cup after retaining the women's national championship of the United States. The runner-up, Miss Kathleen McKane of England, is at the left

A wonderful stamp collection in an exquisite hand-painted album, which reposes in a gold casket, formerly owned by Mohamed Kamel El Kassan, recently sold by auction in London

"To the men that go down to the sea in ships" is the inscription on this monument erected to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the founding of Gloucester, Massachusetts

The American-born Siamese twins, Daisy and Violet Hilton, rowing at Atlanta, Georgia

Probably the most popular actress in Paris to-day—Mlle. Delahaye

This black afternoon frock is enlivened by a pleated vestee and panel of green

A church founded on a rock—the 17th century cathedral at Limburg, Germany

When Mrs. Silver of Letcombe, Wantage, England, goes motoring she takes a competent protector—a young lion

These winged figures greet visitors at the town limits of Penetanguishene, Ont.

Mrs. E. L. Spears, wife of a British general, writes many successful novels under the name of Mary Borden

Rushing through a smoke screen to attack the enemy during "gas and flame" demonstration at Camp Dodge, Iowa

Three little lasses out for a stroll in Middlekerke, Holland

A huge block of limestone is the impressive tribute of Chatsworth, Ont., to her sons who went to war

Albert Herter, American artist, at work in his Paris studio on studies for the huge mural painting he is to make for the Gare de l'Est, commemorating the departure of the French troops for the front on August 1, 1914

