Let Us Make Our Own Treaties. the principle that in relaxing our bonds she trengthened them, and the result of that making comwhole Empire. Owing to treates Mackey if Canada were now to reduce the duties upon English imports the same reduction would apply to imports from the German States and from Bolgium. In devising our tariff against England we are forced to make it suit our interests as best we can against Belgium and the German states; though our fiscal attitude towards these three countries should not necessarily be the same. If Canada were to arrange a trade treaty with the United States it would require Imperial sanction, and if we got that sanction to unrestricted reciprocity than Belgium and the German States, Belgium and the Merian States would thus have free trade with us under terms of a "favored nation" treaty with the British Empire. Mind gon, while the German States, Belgium and the United States would thus have free trade with us, England would be shut ent. Would England sanction a treaty having that effect? But the reciprocity the Americans talk of designs to throw the McKinley wall around Canada, and—sifice we would become potter's clay in their hands—would they allow the German States and Belgium wide gateways through that wall out of respect for treaties between the European powers? These are complications.

We can impose whatever duty we like on British goods or American goods or those of other nations, but if we seek to negotiate a treaty to cultivate a peculiar trade with any country we can only do so via London, where the mixed interests of the Empire and the E where the mixed interests of the Empire will be first considered.

Punish the Guilty.

There is no practical difference between the majority and minority reports handed in from the committee on the affair McGreevy Both state that it would be unfair to hold Sir Hector Langevin guilty of accepting the $10,000 mentioned by Murphy, and this was the only evidence incriminating the late Minister. As both acquit him of personal corruption the country may safely do so. But in defining the amount of his neglect the reports differ. The majority report puts it dly as possible; the minority report puts it with all the brutal frankness it could sum-

We are warranted by the two reports in regarding Sir Hector as a man who may or may not be open to blame for failing to discover the rascality of his subordinates. As a general principle we think the chief should e responsible, for otherwise the people have no armed watchman to defend their treasure from the skulking crowds that worry Governments everywhere. But whether this responsibility now exists is 'held to be debatble-unless the chief is a party to or conscious of abuses in his department. think it should no longer be a debatable mestion. It should be removed from reach We do not think, though, that an offence should be punished until it is made an offence. In the present case nothing could be done against Sir Hector, even though the House unanimously charged him with neglect. He could only be followed into private life with a vote of censure that would profit nobody and the censure that would profit nobody, and the justice of which would be disputable. A
