

conflict between France and England for the possession of the Continent, with its battles, sieges, and adventurous campaigns, is given in detail. The growing estrangement between Great Britain and the Colonies, and the stormy events of the Revolutionary War, are recounted. This epoch is very fully discussed from a British Loyalist point of view. The author avows his sympathy with the colonists in their assertion of their rights as British subjects, and avers his belief that but for their revolutionary Declaration of Independence they would within a twelvemonth have obtained all that they desired without the shedding of blood, without the unnatural alliance with France, much less a war of seven years. But the outbreak and conduct of the war are emphatically condemned.

No portion of this history will be read with greater interest than that which describes the sufferings, in maintaining their allegiance to their King, of the U. E. Loyalist founders and fathers of Canada. For the first time, the full and detailed account of these sufferings is now published. The account of the early development and organization of the Government of the Maritime Provinces and of Upper Canada is full and minute. The stirring events of the War of 1812-15 are also given with much copiousness of detail.

To this work the venerable author has devoted several of the best years of his life. Of U. E. Loyalist stock himself, he writes with hearty sympathy with his subject. He has devoted many years to the study of historical and constitutional questions. He has made laborious and extensive research. And he furnishes in these volumes copious documentary evidence of the validity of his assertions and conclusions.

These splendid volumes reflect distinguished credit upon our connexional press and Book Room.

Sunshine and Storm in the East.

By Mrs. BRASSEY. Henry Holt & Co. 8vo, pp. 447; price, $3 75.

By her previous charming book, "Around the World in the Yacht Sunbeam," of which we gave an illustrated account in this Magazine, Mrs. Brassey delighted a large circle of readers. That book was so successful that she has prepared another describing her recent visit to Constantinople, the Ionian Islands, and England's latest acquisition, the Island of Cyprus. The book is sumptuously illustrated, after sketches by the Hon. A. Y. Bingham and photographs. We are negotiating with the publishers to reproduce a large number of the best illustrations in this Magazine, with descriptive text; so that those who cannot afford this somewhat expensive work will thus possess its most attractive features.

Commentary on the New Testament, Intended for Popular Use. By D. D. WHEDON, LL.D. Volume V., Titus—Revelation. 12mo, pp. 483. New York: Phillips & Hunt; and Methodist Book Rooms, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax. Price $1 75.

Finis coronat opus. In the good providence of God, Dr. Whedon has been enabled to crown the labours of a long and busy life by a complete commentary on the New Testament, which has engrossed the leisure of a quarter of a century of his maturest years, and which, long after he has passed away from earth, shall keep his memory green and lay the Church of Christ under lasting obligation to his consecrated toil. Of all the commentaries with which we are acquainted, we know of none which so completely meets the wants of both preacher and people as this. The size and cost of the great work of Lange and other high-priced Commentaries place them beyond the reach of a very large class. But this Commentary largely supplies their place, by giving in concise form the latest results of the highest criticism and scholarship in Biblical exegesis. To this is added the special advantage of the keen insight, the intuitive critical skill, the large learning, and the terse and vigorous exposition of the venerable author.

The books treated in this volume are, after the Gospels, of prime interest and importance. Among the
