Disposition to Quarrel With Decision of Umpire or Referee is Becoming a Commonplace of Athletic Contests.

London Express: Despite a recent warning by the Rugby Union of Wales, two rugby football matches in the Principality on Saturday were disgraced by the scenes of deliberate rowdyism. In each case the referee was assaulted, in one case being badly mauled, and in each case the crowd of spectators, solely responsible for the disorder of one match, took part in the disturbance. This parody of sportsmanship would be discreditable enough if it were confined to Wales and to football matches. But, the it may find its most violent expression where the inflammable Celtic temperament is involved, the disposition to quarrel with the umpire's decision is becoming a commonplace of athletic contests. We see it in football, in cricket, and even in the Olympic games. Men seem no longer able to take defeat like good sportsmen and the non-playing spectator is frequently the worst offender against the spirit of the game. The 'barracking' of cricketers, whose particular method, however fully it may be justified. The best selections of all Classes: od, however fully it may be justified by Traughts. Lighter Draughts, by the exigencies of the match, is not popular with the crowd, is a bad feature of sport which we have copied from Chunks. from Australia. Everywhere the old unwritten law of sportsmanship seems we have received instructions to sell to be losing its authority. We, who have claimed to be the first and best sportsmen in the world, are in danger during the Christmas season. These are good serviceable horses, capable of doing a lott of work, and each one will be sold for the most it will bring.

sportsmen in the world, are in danger of forfeiting our claims to supremacy. It may be galling to national pride to be beaten at Lord's, at Twickenham, at Henley, or at Stockholm. It should be accounted a much worse disgrace be accounted a much worse disgrace to be convicted of unsportsmanlike

From that time to this Lajoie became one of the greatest hitters in the profession, also one of the most graceful infielders the game has ever known. He played second base for the Quakers later on, and with such big sluegers as Ed. Delehanty and Sam Thompson the Philadelphias fairly terrorized the best pitchers. Lajoie foined the Cleveland club when the American League embraced that city, and has been a Nap ever since, also managing the team for one season with rather dubious results. Some of his friends believe that he will not accopt a reduction in salary, and that rather than be humiliated in this way he will decide to get out of baseball. If he does, it will be many years before his wonderful record on the field is forgotten.
