Ham Burnham of Peterboro made a characteristic speech in which he ex-pressed his opinion freely of the farm-ers and the prohibitionists. The prohi-iticrifies, he bracketed with the people of two hundred years ago who burned witches at the stake. He said they were devoted to the doctrine of force which was being preached by men in the pulpit and women out of it, all over the coun-try. He said it was the nervoueness of the prohibitionists which prevented the manufacture of industrial alcohol to any extent in Canada. Upon the production of industrial alcohol he based his hopes for the future Canada, declaring the time had passed for coal, gasoline and even electricity. The farmers, Mr. Burnham said, were organizing a class movement for the
