HOW PHILLIES WIN THE FIRST OF SERIES

Defeated Red Sox in a Game Devoid of Brilliance — Winners' Victory on Fluke Hits

The Phillies clinched the first game of the world's series yesterday when they defeated the Red Sox, by a score of 8 to 1. Alexander Esch star slugger, worked with Burns between points, and although he succeeded in keeping the Sox from winning he was hit hard.

The Red Sox outthrew their opponents, but some bonehead plays turned the tide of battle and they were vanquished. Shore, who was selected by Carrigan to oppose the great Alexander, was in good form allowing only five scratch hits. His own nerves, apparently, were his greatest enemy. In the fatal eighth he disposed of Alexander and then passed Stock. Bancroft drove the ball back of second and Barry by a wonderful stop prevented it from going into the outfield. Scott, however instead of covering second to retire Stock when Barry made his great stop, stood watching his teammate and neglected his own duties. Thus two men were safe instead of two being out. At this juncture Shore's nerves must have been right on the job for the next batter, Paskert, was given a free pass to first, filling the bases. Then Cravath the Phillies' mighty slugger advanced to the plate. He hit to Scott, who threw to first instead of attempting to get the runner at the plate. Luderus then hit a slow grounder to Shore and as he failed to field it an other run crossed the plate.

In the first of the ninth Manager Carrigan sent two pinch hitters up but they failed to connect safely and the side was soon retired.

The game was considered a freak exhibition and was not satisfactory to the supporters of either team. The Phillies won on fluke hits, and the Red Sox lost on misplays. The box score follows:—

BRITISHER IN MOST DARING WAR EXPLOIT

London, Oct. 8.—How Lieutenant D'Oyly Hughes, attached to a British submarine operating in the Sea of Marmora, swam from his craft, pushing ahead of him a raft bearing explosives with which he made a breach in the Turkish railway skirting the beach, is related in an official report given out here tonight. This statement, chronicling, perhaps, the strangest experience that has befallen any man during this war, says:

"His weapons consisted of an automatic service revolver and a sharpened bayonet. He also carried an electric torch and a whistle. The cliffs proved unscalable at the first point of landing. He therefore relaunched his raft with a less precipitous spot was reached and after a stiff climb and a considerable march he reached the railway."

"Sighting a viaduct," continues the statement, "he planned the strategy it, but abandoned the idea because of the presence of enemy workmen. He then selected a brisk culvert, under which he placed a charge of explosive and lit a fuse. He effected his escape by running a mile down the railway, and plunged into the sea just as the explosion went off. Debris was scattered near him, indicating that the explosion was effective. Having blown his whistle to summon the submarine, the lieutenant swam out to sea. However, on sighting the submarine, he mistook it for a group of Turkish rowboats, whereupon he swam towards shore and began to ascend the cliff in hope of hiding. He then discovered his mistake, and again entered the water. Subsequently he was rescued by the submarine when he was on the verge of exhaustion."
