AND BING-HAM WAS HIS NAME!"

Visitor from the Land of Liberty Insisted on Being "Pinched."

(Montreal Herald.)

A man from Brooklyn, answering to the name of Thomas Bingham, gumshoed into headquarters one night this week, and after gaining mysteriously around asked a cop in a hollow voice to be introduced to someone in authority, as he had important news to divulge that required the utmost secrecy.

Friend constable, sensing some Sherlock Holmesian mystery, hastily eased the stranger to the innermost sanctum of the police, where he was taken in tow by Sergeant W. Lamont.

"My name is Bingham," said the guest, "and I come from Brooklyn. The guest is laying for me because I fell down on a job that they sent me out to do. I'm off those guys for life, for it didn't help me any when I got hauled to a German jail. Say, Chief," wound up the self-invited guest with a white, "Put me in the coop. I want to be pinched."

While Bingham was spilling his tale of woe, several of the detectives casually gathered around, and after giving him the once over came to the conclusion that he was either a snow bird, a needle juggler, or plain nut, but when he was searched a few minutes afterwards their suspicions were confirmed, for he was found in possession of a packet of cocaine and the usual outfit that a "dope" generally parks around in his clothes.

Inspector Lamont was puzzled, for his self-inflicted prisoner assumed an appearance of normalcy, and every subject but his favorite obsession. The inspector brought Bingham up before the recorder charged with having drugs in his possession, and when the latter heard the charge read he immediately told the recorder that he was guilty and that the sun would be shining on both sides of the street if he was sent to jail immediately.

When the recorder remanded him until Friday for trial he was delighted, and told his friend the inspector that his period of enforced leisure was the best thing that could happen to him.

ELEVEN ARRESTS IN ALLEGED COUNTERFEITING

Boston, Oct. 15.—Eleven men, believed to be members of a gang of counterfeiters working along the Atlantic coast, have been arrested at Norfolk, Va., and Charleston, S. C., within the last twenty-four hours.

Inspector Hobart of the treasury department staff yesterday informed Judge Hayden in the Roanoke district court. He said most of the spurious paper consisted of $1 bills, shaved down and altered by the addition of a color at the corners.

"DANDERINE"

Grows Thick, Heavy Hair

35-cent Bottle Ends all Dandruff,
Stops Hair Coming Out

Ten minutes after using Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

Danderine is the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow long, strong and luxuriant. One application of Danderine makes thin, lifeless, colorless hair look youthfully bright, lustrous, and just twice as abundant.

BRITISH NAVY AGAIN ADOPTS BADGE SYSTEM

Symbolic Device Found of Great Benefit in Army for Many Years.

London, Oct. 15.—The Royal Navy, during the war, represented no fewer than 6,000 vessels, ranging in size and importance from the Queen Elizabeth down to drifters and trawlers. Since the war this number has been reduced to something like pre-war proportions. There are now approximately 500 vessels in His Majesty's navy, and about 250 of these are to have a special and official badge or device which is approved by the admiralty. About 240 of these badges have been designed by Major Charles Foulkes, and castings and brass castings made of them.

Since the middle of the nineteenth century warships have been distinguished by badges, but none of these badges, as is the case in the army, were officially recognized and systematized. They were, as a general rule, the private badge or a magical image or device which took the fancy of the ship's commander. A change in the command almost invariably led to a change in the ship's distinguishing mark or device, and it sometimes happened that two ships were carrying the same badge, and five different badges have been known to be used by one ship. This led to great confusion, and, what was of greater importance, the tradition of the sea service was not always enhanced through the insignia adopted.

Badges, levies, and mottoes have intensified esprit de corps in the regular army to such an extent that the corporate symbol has become to the individual officer more honored than the ancestral arms, while to the private soldier it has been a regimental talisman.

It has been laid down that where actual names of ships will not admit of symbolic treatment, some portion of the heraldic bearing of a former ship of the same name should be employed. In the case of ships bearing the names of individuals the same course is followed.

The Torbay has a badge for her badge. This represents the landing of William, Prince of Orange, at Torbay, in 1689. The St. David has a purely symbolical device—a lighthouse. Tactician takes a chess knight, to suggest tactics. The Sterling is supposed to take its name from an officer named Sterling, but the spelling has been altered, and the badge is a E. Sesame, again, has a key as a badge, and the ships named after cities take city arms.
