BULBS FOR BRIGHTENING

Outdoor Culture of Hardy Spring Flowering Bulbs.

An Open Situation Desirable and Reasonable Care in Planting With Protection During the First Winter—Fall Pasture for Stock.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THERE is probably no class of plants that gives more satisfaction and are more thoroughly appreciated by the flower lover than a collection of spring flowering bulbs, flowering as they do from quite early in spring, even before the winter covering of snow has entirely left us, until well on into the early months of summer before but very few of the other border plants are in flower. Their bright flowers are doubly acceptable on this account.

Location.—Bulbs are best planted where there is good drainage and where no surface water lies in winter or early spring. When planted in masses or beds, it is best to have the soil in the centre of the bed a few inches higher than the margin, so as to pitch the water off readily. Bulbs succeed best planted in an open situation and not too close under buildings or under the dense shade of trees. For the later flowering kinds of bulbs, however, that flower about the end of May, such as the Darwin type of tulip, a little shade prolongs the length of the blooming season considerably.

Soil.—The best kind of soil for bulbs is a moderately rich, light, loamy soil. They will succeed fairly well in a sandy soil, but do not give as fine blooms as in soil of a loamy nature. If the soil is of a clayey nature, dig in some sand or black soil from the bush, or both, to lighten it. Fresh strawy manure should never be dug into the soil when planting. If manure is applied at planting time, it should be well decayed, barnyard manure, almost the nature of the soil itself, even then it should be dug in an inch or two underneath the bulbs so as not to touch them.

When to Plant Bulbs.—The best time for planting outdoor bulbs is about the second or third week in October, although bulbs may be planted until the ground is frozen over for the winter, even as late as the end of November or early in December. Later planted bulbs do not, as a rule, however, give as good results. The soil should be thoroughly dug and raked fine before planting.

Depth to Plant.—All of these smaller growing bulbs should be planted from two to three inches under the soil and quite thickly together, an inch and a half or two inches apart, to give a good effect. The Tulips, Dutch Hyacinths and Narcissus grow about twelve to eighteen inches in height and can be dotted in masses or blocks in flower beds, or in groups more towards the back of a perennial border. They are also very effective planted in groups among or around shrubs. Tulips and Narcissus should be planted about four inches under the surface of the soil and about six inches apart. A group of these of a circular or oval shape, fifteen to twenty inches in diameter, especially Narcissus, has a very pleasing and bright effect in early spring, dotted here and there over the perennial or mixed border.

Protecting Bulbs in Winter.—All bulbs, especially late planted ones, are best protected during the first winter, as it prevents the bulbs from heaving and lifting. Bulbs that have become well established in the border require very little if any protection in winter. Long, strawy manure, straw or coarse grass about three or four inches in depth, make a good winter covering. Green pine boughs laid over the manure prevent unsightliness. Pine boughs alone make a good winter protection. Dutch Hyacinths especially need some protection in winter, as they are not as hardy as Tulips and Narcissus. The covering should be taken off about the end of March or early in April, when the weather has become settled. Remove the covering part at a time, taking away the wet underneath part first and replacing an inch or so of the lighter part for a week or so until the top growth of bulbs becomes hardened to the weather. Hot sun is often as injurious to bulb growth as late spring frosts.

Hardy Kinds to Plant.—Tall growing, 1 to 2 feet:
Narcissus—Emperor, Empress, Bicolor Victoria, Golden Spur, Poeticus ornatus, Barri sonpica, Mrs. Langtry, Stella, Poeticus Elvira.

Tulips—Darwin, Cottage Garden and Early Flowering in variety.
Dwarf-growing kinds, 6 inches to 1 foot high—Crocus in variety, Scilla, Chionodoxa (Glow of the Snow), Leucojum (Snowflake). The Paper White Narcissus, Chinese Sacred Lily, and the Roman Hyacinths are not hardy enough for planting out of doors. They are only useful for growing indoors.—W. H. Hunt, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

Pasture Necessary for Stock In Fall.

One of the essential factors in keeping live stock in good condition through the fall and early winter, which is highly important, is good fall pasture, says Andrew Ross, vice-director of the Minnesota Experiment Station. Nothing excels the grasses for pasture, though mixtures of the grasses and clover are better than either grasses or clover alone and furnish the best kind of feed for all kinds of stock. Where an abundance of cultivated grasses can be obtained for pasture no further attention need be given the subject. Meadow aftermath containing clover, or timothy and clover, makes good fall feed. Clover growing in the stubble field is also an excellent fall pasture.

RIOTING IN CORK

CORK, Nov. 11.—Constant collision between the military and civilians here culminated in serious rioting last night when soldiers, enraged in consequence of frequent attacks, broke through the police and came into conflict with the crowd. Sticks and stones were freely used and belts were removed and forcefully swung. There were also a few revolver shots. A captain and a private of the troops were badly wounded. The police eventually dispersed the crowd and got the soldiers back to their barracks.

THE GOAT

By Adeline Mac Givray

"How-d'-do!" I hope you're well today," cried Bert Russell, doffing his cap and bowing with extreme politeness. But Clarence passed by scornfully without even casting a glance in his direction. "Dear and dumb, are you, Clarence?" queried Bert, with an air of great concern. "Or is it pride? Oh, Clarence, pride is a terrible thing." "You're no gentleman or you wouldn't go around insulting people. Why don't you go home and shine your shoes. They're filthy!" Burst out Clarence. Bert sighed and said as if to himself: "Pride goeth before a fall!" Clarence bit his lip and strode off with his chin in the air. Suddenly he tripped and fell sprawling to the pavement. Bert had thrust a stick in front of him and laid him low. "Now see what you've done," cried Clarence, rising wrathfully. "You've made me ruin my trousers. Just because you're dirty and sloppy is no reason why you should ruin my clothes!" "Oh, I'm so sorry!" cried Bert, with dancing eyes. "Let me help dust you off." And he began treating him as if he were a dusty carpet, whaling him energetically with his stick. "Hi, quit that," squealed Clarence. "That hurts." "Why don't you bluff him?" asked a sweet voice close by. "You're as big as he." Clarence turned around and saw Grace Evans watching them. "I wouldn't fight such a common chap," he said. "I'd get dirty if I touched him." And he looked down with a pleased smile at his own natty clothes which he was so careful not to muss or soil. "I'd rather get a little dirty than stand for all that teasing," said Grace with a flash in her blue eyes. "Isn't worth it," Clarence said, pulling down the cuffs of his silk shirt so they would show more. He then took out a silk handkerchief and waved it about so his two friends might smell the perfume on it. Grace looked a little impressed but Bert sniffed "Bwah" and strode away. When Clarence reached home he was met by his sister June at the gate. "Oh, Clarence!" she cried. "What do you think? Daddy has bought a goat for Cousin Bob's birthday, and the goat's in our back yard and it's going to be taken to Cousin Bob's the first thing tomorrow. It's a beauty. It has horns and the nicest, white silky coat." Clarence hurried through the house to see the animal when a well-known voice from the kitchen called: "Oh, Miss Clarence, won't you all get a
