She Discloses to Materfamilias the Secret of Blue Monday. The lecture was finished, and the lecturer stood waiting for questions. "Tell these women why you said I was tired this morning," commanded the hostess. For an instant the lecturer looked blank with astonishment; then she remembered and smiled.

It was Monday, the day which always follows Sunday, the day on which business and housework and worry and rushing and school and regular hours all begin again after a day which was given the world for rest.

Almost directly after breakfast Mrs. S. had gone up to her bedroom and, sinking down in a chair, had said: "Why, I cannot understand it. I did absolutely nothing yesterday—you know how I laid around all day—yet this morning I am tired to death." The Daily Programme.

The lecturer replied: "But really, you know, a part of you did work very hard. This is what you did: Usually you arise promptly at an early hour, so to have breakfast for your son at half after 7. You are busy about the house and apt to go out in the fresh air for some time during the morning. You lunch at 1 o'clock. In the afternoon you may lie down, but not for hours, and you go out or move around and have many things to occupy you. Then you dine at half after 6. Each day has its regular duties, and you are a busy woman, with your club work, your philanthropies, friends and pleasures, and you accomplish much. The Sunday Scheme.

"Now, what did you do yesterday? You arose late, had breakfast at 9 o'clock, and because of the late hour you were hungry, so you ate heartily. Then you took a book and put yourself upon a couch. There you remained until you had to get ready for dinner at 1 o'clock, and, it being a day of rest, the cook had been working all the morning to provide an unusually elaborate meal. The dishes were tempt ing, and again you ate heartily, really an unusual amount. The after was spent on the couch—no exercise, no fresh air. But when 7 o'clock came, although you were not hungry, you fancied you might be later, so you ate a 'light' lunch of bread and milk. You went early to bed, and of course you

How Blue Monday Comes In. "You fancy because you did not use your arms and legs that you did no work. But what of your head and your overworked digestive tract? Eyes and brain were occupied all day, and your digestive apparatus, without the usual aid of exercise and fresh air, was more than usually overburdened. You crowded two hearty meals fairly close together; there were scarcely more than three hours between them, and then fortunately five hours elapsed before the next one. Bread and milk contains considerable nourishment. Milk is not easy of digestion for you, and you ate a good sized bowlful. You may call that a lazy, but I call it a hard worked Sunday, and there is good reason for your feeling so tired. Your whole sys-tem is feeling the effects of trying to assimilate and dispose of more food and waste matter than it demanded or wanted."
This, in the main, is the secret of blue Monday.-Good Housekeeping.

Placing the sink in front of a window helps to make the routine work of washing pans and kettles less like drudgery, says a household magazine. To secure an architectural effect for the exterior of a house this pleasure of an outlook is often thoughtlessly taken away from the kitchen. The secret of making kitchen work enjoyable is to keep recurring duties at a minimum, relieving them by every possible labor saving device.

Brightness on the Laws. Do you want a mass of brilliant flowers for a bed on the lawn? The petunia will please you. So will the cal-liopsis. These are both annuals. If you care to go to a little expense, you can make a most gorgeous bed by using scarlet salvia. This will have to be grown from plants procured from a florist, as seedlings are not to be depended on to give the color wanted in all cases.

Peel, silce and seed two oranges, peel and silce two bananas and chop coarsely one dozen English walnuts.
Arrange the fault in layers in individual lettuce cups on small plates and pour over a little mayonnaise. Gar-nish with the chopped nuts.

Apropos of the Leuten season, but good any time, Table Talk illustrates a center cut of fish steamed and garnished with tomato or pickles and parsley. It is an appropriate way to serve any large, firm fleshed fish, such as cod, hallbut or salmon, and steaming will be found more satisfactory than bolling. Wash and dry the fish, dust it well with flour and wrap it in a dampened and flour square of cheesecioth. Lay on a plate or dish and steam until the fiesh draws away from the bones. After scraping off the skin transfer carefully to a hot platter and add the garnish. It is usually best to serve the sauce separately.

Pure Tea Hygienic Packages

Users of Grand Mogul Tea pronounce it the beverage of good health. Grown on the sun-kissed mountains of Ceylon, it has the delicious and mellow flavor of purity.

Prepared by machinery from plantation to cup. The packages, lined with airtight paper, protect it from store dust and microbes. Never sold in bulk nor in poisonous lead. The effort to substitute some, other tea to be "just as good" is the desire of some dealers for an excessive profit on an inferior article.
