Does God Bless the Righteous

MOST Christians seem to hold the belief that if they walk according to God's will He will bless them in worldly matters as well as spiritually. What foundation is there for this belief?

We are assured in Math. 7:11, that God is willing to give good things to them that ask Him, but we are also told in Math. 6:19-21, not to lay up treasures on earth, but in heaven, for where our treasure is there our heart will be also. The people of Israel, before Christ came, while they were still under the law, were promised blessings on earth, nationally and as individuals, if they served God with their whole heart according to the law. In this manner they were to be the means of revealing to the nations around them the blessings that followed from serving the one true God. They sinned and later refused to accept Christ as their Messiah. Therefore, they have been cast off temporarily, but are to be restored to favor again. (Acts 15:14-17.) When the Jews were cast off the age or dispensation of law ended, and the age or dispensation of grace was ushered in. We are living in this last age. The rewards promised to us are spiritual rather than earthly. They are better in every way than those given to the Jews. (Hebrews 8:6.) "As believers born again, we have a new nature and belong no longer to the earth, but we belong to heaven." "If, therefore, you have been raised with the Christ, seek the things which are above, where the Christ is sitting at the right hand of God; have your mind on the things which are above, not on the things that are on the earth." (Col. 3:1.) "In the world ye shall have tribulation." (John 16:33.) "Let your conversation be without the love of money, satisfied with your present circumstances." (Heb. 13:5.) "For here have we no continuing city, but we seek one to come." (Heb. 13:14.) God delights to bless His children on earth, but because He wants us to occupy our minds with Him and with thoughts of how best we may serve Him on earth, the emphasis now is not on earthly, but on heavenly rewards. "The natural man lives for the earthly things, and strives for the things which are seen. His delight is in treasures which are here below, and connected with this life is care, worry, anxiety and at last the loss of that which was cherished." (Note Luke 12:16 to 21.)

Lessening Housecleaning Terrors

By "Aunt Fanny," Peterboro Co., Ont.

ONCE upon a time, housecleaning days were the maddest and the saddest days of the year. "No, that sad-same season isn't one of my own invention, but I read it some place not long ago and it appealed to me as being very expressive. In the days of our mothers and grandmothers, the advent of the spring season was the signal to commence turning everything topsy-turvy from garret to cellar, and there would be such a siege of white-washing, papering and painting, that the house would be in a state of confusion for probably weeks at a time.

We don't clean house that way now,adays though, for which we should be truly thankful. I am one, however, have not yet worked out a plan to follow when house cleaning, so satisfactory that it cannot be improved on, and I imagine there are plenty of others the same. I am sending along a few of my ideas on the subject, however, with the hope that other readers of this department will follow suit.

My first raid this spring was made on the attic. It is one part of the house that I don't like particularly to clean, as there are always a number of articles which have accumulated during the year to dispose of in some way. I placed up courage on a bright, sunny day last week, took and set to work. Really it wasn't such a big job after all. The things which required airing were taken down and hung on the clothesline, while I swept up, washed windows, sorted the articles of clothing and put them in their proper places, or discarded those no longer useful. I also went through the summer clothing and arranged it so that I can lay my hands on the various articles whenever they are needed. The boxes and trunks in which I keep the winter clothing and bedding, were cleaned and aired, ready to receive the articles when the weather is warm enough to discard them.

To-day I cleaned the ceiling. It may seem rather ridiculous to do the attic, then the cellar, but I like to get the worst jobs done first, and the cellar can be cleaned, even if the weather is cool and wet. Some housewives might object to cleaning the cellar before the furnace fire is out. I don't consider, however, that much dust and dirt will accumulate from now on as far as the furnace is concerned. Our furnace is in a small room in the cellar separated from everything else, so that dirt and dust is reduced to a minimum at all times. Any vegetable and apple still in the cellar were picked over and all decayed matter removed, shelves were washed off and as a finishing touch I gave the floor, which is concrete, a good cleaning. The cellar floor slopes slightly to one end, so that the water runs off into the drain. My cellar smells sweet and clean again and I am exceedingly thankful that I have done my housecleaning out of the way at least.

If nothing intervenes, I intend cleaning the pantry to-morrow. One has to put in so much time cleaning the pantry and kitchen without getting showy results, that I don't like leaving them till the last. But then, we have talked over enough and must get a good rest to-night, so that I will be "feeling fit" for to-morrow's duties.

Poast Omelet: Soak a slice of bread in half a cup of fresh milk. Beat two eggs, whites and yolks separately, and turn on the milk and bread, together with a half cup prepared peanuts and a little salt and pepper. Pour in buttered pan and cook as usual.
