fact, in several instances parties who owned claims on both creeks sold their Dominion holdings for a song in order to more quickly develop those on All Cald. The creek is a tributary of Flat creek and is from eight to ten miles long. The lower portion of it widens out considerably, resembling to a great extent the lower end of Dominion. As one proceeds up stream, howperceptibly and in places becomes but little more than a gorge. For several miles it perallels that portion of Do-minion between the discoveries and from Caribou is distant only three hours, walk. At the time All Gold was staked in 'of great expectations were had of the creek. On practically every claim a cabin was erected, some of them being of whitsawed logs. The work that winter failed to locate a paystreak and within little over a year after discovery was recorded the creek was aban doned. The many cabins have re-mained tenantless until within the past six or eight months. During last winter parties sauk some holes on what was formerly 8 below. But little suc-cess attended their efforts at first and with the arrival of spring they found themselves out months of labor and no small amount of actual cash. Other ioles were sunk on the opposite side of the creek from that upon which they had previously been working and there they found what they were seeking. Nothing big to be sure, but 10 and 15 cents to the pan looks good when one has formerly found only colors, and small ones at that. The ground was staked and Friday last at the gold commissioner's office an application was made to record a discovery, which was granted. By reason of all the claims previously located on the creek having reverted to the crown, the creek stands practically as a new one upon which a stake has never been planted. The stampede occasioned by the filing of the discovery was a small one, which hadicated either a lack of confidence on the part of the professional stakers or everyone has all the property they care for. To yesterday but five claims have been located above discovery and
