Washington, Oct. 29.-'A suit for Washington, Oct. 29.—A suit for $50,000 damages for breach of promise against United States Senator William V. Sullivan, of Mississippi, was filed in the District of Columbia supreme court on Saturday. Mai Lucy Leeton, the plaintiff, says she first met Sullivan, in 1895, in his law office in Oxford, while he was defending her brother-in-law. She said he said he loved her and "by wiles and artifices" tried to get her to accompany him to Chattanooga, Tenn. She refused, but allowed him to write to her. She was at that time separated from her husband, and she says Sullivan promised

Y., two months ago, Both are married. Husted admits the elopement, but claims he traded wives with Shearow, giving $20 to boot. Mrs. Shearow says she gave half the amount herself. gave half the amount herself.

Husted claims that since the trade, Mrs. Shearow inherited $6,000, and that's the reason Shearow wants her that's the reason Shearow wants her back. They took Shearow's 4-year old child, and Shearow deposited $100 in a Poughkeepsie bank for the little one. The wife's attempting to draw the money through a bank here led to their identification and arrest. Husted has lots of money, and says he thinks he can settle everything.

The Paris Cab Driver.

Outside of many wine shops in Paris and in the principal cities of France a sign is often to be seen bearing the words, Au cocher fidele ("To the faithful cocher"); beneath it a driver is pictured, hat in hand, restoring to a gentleman and lady, the hirers of the coach, a purse forgotten on the cush-lons of the vehicle. This is not a conception of the artist, nor vile flattery of the restaurant or wine shop to draw thither the coachman with a foible for the bottle, but a reality which often occurs and of which the cocher has every right to be proud.

Anybody who has lived any length of time in Paris will indorse the statement. Who has not forgotten an umbrella, a walking stick, a small satchel or some little object on the seat or floor of a public vehicle? And who has not had his property restored without even having taken the number of the vehicle, without any remembrance of the physiognomy of the driver? By a simple application to a special office at the prefecture of police, where all objects found in public carriages are deposited and arranged according to the date and hour at which they were brought in, one is able promptly to regain possession of his lost property.

This reflects great credit on the Paris "cabbies," few of whom, by the way, are born Parislans.

Professor Countemfast is a small man with a large mentality. His wife is a tall woman, who believes in the power of matter over mind. The proessor had been absorbed the whole of $200 in the Tremont House, Chicago, and then ran away without settling it. The trunk which remained in his room was unusually heavy and when opened after his departure was found to contain specimens of ore, brought from the gold and silver mines of Colorado, where presumably he had lost all his money. After waiting out the legal time Mr. Gage sent the contents of the trunk to an assayer, who returned two bits of metal valued at more than $100 in excess of the bill after deducting his own fees.

The Trunk Paid. Some years ago a man ran up a bill
