LOCAL MATTERS.

NOTICE.

The public are hereby cautioned against paying subscriptions or amounts for advertisements to any person on behalf of the STAR, unless said person hold written authority from me to collect and receive the same.
J. E. O'LEARY,
Ed. "Star."

Fast Trip.
Mr. C. C. Waite's fast sailing barque "Premier Mackenzie" arrived home with her cargo in sixteen days.

Second Trip.
The barque D'ougan's first arrival here this spring is now back, and loading for her second trip.

Examination for Licenses.
Mr. Inspector Cox this week examined two candidates for school licenses; the one holding a third class and the other a second.

Accident.
A young lad 4 years old son of James Hackett, of Abbeville Road had his leg broken by a cart wheel passing over it Thursday.

Weight Seales.
We notice our energetic merchant Mr.
Flanagan is erecting a Fairbank's scale for weighing hay and other heavy loads and articles near his store. We wish Mr.
Flanagan success in this enterprise.

Sentence.
Perry the forger has been sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. It is admitted by everyone that Mr. Lawlor's defense in this hopeless case was a very able one. Everything was against him, yet he split the jury that went in.

Picnic at St. Margaret's.
Those who care for a good day's recreation and a beautiful drive should attend the picnic to be held at St. Margaret's on the 10th inst. Extensive and first class preparations will be made for the comfort and entertainment of the party.

Summer Logging.
R. P. Whitney, Esq., and Messrs.
Ritchie are looking up men to send to the lumber woods the middle of this month. The parties will only cut those logs growing such a distance from the brooks that they can be dragged into them. These logs are intended for the autumn's sawing.

The Streets Blocked.
A correspondent calls our attention to the fact that slovens, carts and other stumbling blocks are permitted to stand on the streets in such a way often as to impede safe passage. This is a greater nuisance after dark than in the day; and a lady driving down Canal Street Wednesday night collided with a sloven, standing nearly on the centre of the street.

Science and that kind of thing.
A banking gentleman in Newcastle who has a strong natural taste for botany is making a collection of the flora of the Province; a prominent scientific gentleman, who will be assisted by another making a collection of the fauna of the Province; while the prominent gentleman, who has begun an entomological collection. We know of no more enterprising way one could spend his spare minutes than at some such employment as this.

Discrimination.
There was a very excellent piece of sidewalk from Wilsons store for about 200 yards down, but the commissioner has had it dug up and new planks in triple tier put down. This was really about the best piece of sidewalk in town except the new sidewalk, and besides this sidewalk is one not used one-tenth as much as that on the opposite side. The principal sidewalks, though rotten and disgraceful, and dangerous for persons after night, are not heeded at all. Why not pull up that rabbit track leading round by Pallen's and Tingley's, and lay down one at least twice as wide.
There is now hardly room for one to pass another there.

Base Petition.
A correspondent writes informing us that a petition has been presented to the department praying for permission to take back with nets from Pointe-Chave to the Light House at Esquimaux during the month of September. The objection which the department has had to this fishing is that spawning salmon would be taken with the bass; but the fishermen contend this could not be done above the point. Bass they say can only be caught in shallow water and where it is muddy, while the spawning salmon they maintain keep in the deep water.
From what the fishermen say, and all we can learn, we think the department should grant their request.

Deaths from Diphtheria.
Emma Smith, a fine girl, daughter of Smith, aged 15 years, died of diphtheria yesterday.

At Oak Point diphtheria is making sad havoc. In the Nief family a boy 7 years old, lately sickened and died; subsequently a sister, aged 13 years, died.
Just after the burial of James Terrence, a fine young man nearly 30 also succumbed to the disease.

We learn that Susan Nief aged 34 died this morning, and that David and Mrs. Nief are getting better. The people round about are so terrified that the stricken family cannot get the attendance they otherwise would from their kind bearded neighbours.]

The Board of Health.
The Board of Health is again going to "do something." Meanwhile the town is festering, poisonous matter is floating among the people, some are dying with typhoid fever, and some are dying of diphtheria. Meanwhile between the t-ling of the funeral bells, it is a joyful sound to hear the Board of Health always say they are going to "do something." That they are going to do something, however, will hardly repay the broken hearted parents whose fire-sides have been desolated by disease. When the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah were destroyed by Gods fire and brimstone for their uncleanness no one pined them very much, and if disease deplete the town of Chatham perhaps no one would sorrow, but that unsuspecting persons from country places that came into town inspire our poisonous charged air and bear home the germs of death. The record of death at Oak Point where several grown to men and women's estate have been carried away is truly appalling. That the disease was brought from Chatham there is not a shadow of a doubt. We wonder if the stricken homes there can be made cheerful by the assurance that our Board of Health is "going to do something?" It appears more that the several "Acts" are not printed at Frederick till a certain late period in the summer; and that we have all been "barking up the wrong tree"; and that if any copies of the Act were written for, the answer given, if any answer were given to an application not made, was that the laws were not printed. Well, if this be the rule, then the sooner the Government make a new one the better for itself and the public.
What is the use of giving a Board a commission if they are not given rule and authority to work by? Is it possible there are no printed regulations to be had till a certain period? We would like this query answered, but we also wish the public to know that Mr. James Griffin has had the Board of Health in his possession for a fortnight or more now, and has done nothing—but is "going to do something." We must stop. If we wrote more, the love of truth should make us say things that would make somebody angry.

Those who write for fame, for honor, or emolument, cannot do better than us pens made by the Esterbrook Steel Pen Company. Samples furnished on application by addressing their office, 25 John Street, New York.

St. Margaret's Picnic is to be held this year on 10th inst.—Wednesday next—on the church grounds, Ricin-bucto Road. Every effort is being put forth to make this the most enjoyable picnic of the season. There will be no charge for entrance to the grounds. First class refreshments will be furnished in abundance and variety. Games and amusements will be provided for all ages and everything may be enjoyed at moderate cost. Do not, therefore, forget St.
Margaret's picnic on the 10th inst.
There will also take place on the same day the consecration of the new Bell by his Lordship the Bishop.—Adv.

THE SCENES IN ROME DURING THE RE-MOVAL OF THE REMAINS OF PIUS THE NINTH.

St. James's Gazette.

ROME, July 16.—At this time of the year, when the night is the best part of the day, when the moon is bright and the night breeze fresh, the announcement of a spectacle such as the transport at midnight through the streets of Rome of the remains of a Pope, and that Pope Pio Nono, would have been quite sufficient to keep all Rome in the streets and squares through which the procession was to pass, apart from any religious or anti-religious interest in the ceremony. In old times the ceremonial was far more magnificent.

Just before midnight torch-bearers belonging to the different Catholic associations began to form a double line from the sacristy door toward the piazza and at five minutes past the hour the funeral car, containing all that remains of Pius IX., issued from under the arch leading to the piazza Santa Marta, on the left hand side of the Basilica. The car was drawn by four black horses, the first pair ridden by a postilion in cocked hat, and had a lamp at each of its four corners. Over it was thrown the red velvet cloth that used to be hung from the Loggia of St. Peter's when the Papal benediction was given there at Easter.

It dates from the time of Innocent III., about the year 1200. Beside the car walked priest-bearing candles, and behind it followed carriages of church digni-taries, the first containing Monsignor Follicadi, Archbishop of Ephesus, who had pronounced the absolution. And then the torch-bearers fell into the line from right and left; the houses at the end and sides of the piazza illuminated. The light on the faded red velvet cover and the long line of lights winding through the crowd made a very picturesque ensemble, as seen from the steps before St.
Peter's; and even at this early stage there was some confusion. As there was no police or troops to keep the line, casual cars forced their way among the carriages following the bier; and at the angle of Castle S. Angelo, a disagreeable scene began, which was unfortunately continued at intervals up to the very door of S. Lorenzo. A group of youth, which at first certainly did not number more than fifty or sixty, pushed their way among the torch-bearers, shouting "Viva l'Italia!" "Down with the priest!" and (in their clerical papers) "Throw him into the river!" but receiving no encouragement, nor any response but cries of "Canaglia" from the crowd, ceased operations.

Further on, however, in the narrow streets leading to Piazza Venezia the scene was renewed, and near the Church of the Gesù a regular scuffle occurred. All up the Via Nazionale the same scenes were repeated, the same tumultuous din, which the few police seemed powerless to disperse, keeping up their disgraceful din. They sang Garibaldi's hymn to down the sound of the prayers, and not infrequently gave or accepted fight with the bystanders. At the railway station advantage was taken of a narrowly gravelled square to melt the carriages, and the military had to be sent for.
The road to the gate of S. Lorenzo was then blocked, but some of the disturbers managed to get by, and attempted an open demonstration before S. Lorenzo.
Here, however, they were finally dispersed. The coffin was then taken into the church, and received by cardinals Monaca la Valtetta, Merli and Simeoni, executors of the late Pope.

Opinions differ very much as to who is chiefly to blame for this disgraceful exhibition of feeling. The liberals try to excuse themselves by saying they received provocation; but I myself watched a group of Roman l'Arris before the ceremony began, who had evidently come with no other intention than to make a row. Then they say that either the business should have been done really in secret, or else that the clericals should have asked the Government for troops to keep order, instead of adopting a middle course, or that they should have removed the Pope's remains by rail. To the latter objection traditional custom is opposed, to say nothing of the intense heat of the sun in the mid-day hours. To the former objection there is the answer that the hour chosen was one when the streets are usually most empty. Thus Pio Nono made his last journey through an unusually quiet city as he lived in. He now rests at S. Lorenzo, under a very simple monument, which by his will was not to cost more than 2,000 francs, and which bears the simple inscription: "Osa-si at Cineas Pii Pappo IX. Orate pro Eo."

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.
There was a numerous attendance at the House of Lords on Monday for the second reading of the Land Bill. All the leaders were present except Lord Granville, who is indisposed. Lord Carling-ford (Liberal) moved the second reading in a long speech.

Lord Salisbury severely criticised the Land Bill. He said that according to the Bill the landlords could not even select a site for cottages. He became a sort of mortgagee of his own estate, with the

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

HON. SENATOR MUIRHEAD'S WAREHOUSE STRUCK AND SCORCHED BY LIGHTNING.

About half-past 11 o'clock this forenoon the sky suddenly darkened, and huge leaden and purple colored clouds began to gather thick and fast. All the forenoon had been very sultry; and as soon as a light Northerly wind began to blow a heavy mass of lightning laden clouds moved across the river. The New Era was lying at Hon. Mr. Muirhead's wharf when a portion of the lightning cloud came in contact with the Northerly side of the roof. There was a vivid flash and instantaneously a deafening peal of thunder; and the New Era hands saw the warehouse was on fire.
Captain Cal immediately sounded the alarm, which brought parties to the spot. There were 30 or 40 barrels of oil, a large quantity of coal and various other articles in the building, and in a few minutes the oil barrels were all alight. The doors were burst open, and several rushed in to take out the stuff.
Mr. W. Yeise being among the number with a fountain pump. With this he kept the fire down till No. 1 Engine came up, but it was a long, weary, dreary time before the steam engine trundled its slow self along. The building might have burned down for all it could do.

The damage done was slight. Several coaks were scorched; and one panel in the rear side of the store was burnt.
The lightning as we have said got on the northern side of the roof, and followed the rafters over, and playing several frisks, splitting portions of rafter, and splintering the handle of a grapple, thence passed down the rear side and into the ground. Some think the wire figging in the building, and in a lightning there, but we are not of this opinion. The wind brought the lightning cloud in on the building and the first solid or conductive power it met, caused the escapement of the electricity, hence the explosion and damage. We congratulate the Senator that it was nothing more serious; while the anxiety of the crowds who turned out, and their earnest concern and desire to assist, were highly commendable.

Messrs. Blake and Huntington.

A correspondent sends us a very sensible article on the tour of the Siamese wives through the Provinces. He briefly outlines their mission as a campaign in the interests of power and patronage. Of Mr. Blake he says:—

That Mr. Blake is an able and an eloquent speaker endowed with the happy faculty of bringing up before his audience old and worn out themes clothed in new and attractive guise, is well known to those who have read his speeches upon public affairs. He is also famed for the facility with which he brings forth from the visionary store house of his imagination fancy facts and figures to prove that Governments to build up and improve the trade, commerce and manufactures of a country are only "dies on the wheel," and that any other they may take in that direction will only be injurious to its people by diverting their means and energies from the legitimate trade channels of the country; into artificial ones which, not only, can never be self sustaining but will always be a burthen upon the great mass of the population. In his addresses he proves by the most specious and plausible arguments that the benefits our people are just commencing to reap from the National Policy are false owing to their being brought about by a system that is in direct opposition to the speculative trade theories of the Grits.
To him and his party, it matters little that the trade, commerce and manufactures of the country have been growing during the past three years owing to this policy. In their eyes, the system that has been the means of inducing men of capital to invest their means in manufactures of every description, thereby retaining thousands of our population in the country, by giving them remunerative employment, though good in practice, is entirely false in theory, and should therefore be at once cast aside. The able man in which he deals with the various subjects he treats most delightfully and ably and it must be a rich intellectual treat to listen to his arguments and flows of rhetoric when he undertakes to prove that positive facts, are in truth fiction when they clash with his own ideal trade theories. We say by all means let every voter in the land go and hear Mr. Blake's elo-
