Two Hundred Questions.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"Every man hath two or three birthdays: two days at least, in every year which set him up on revolving the lapse of time as it affects his mortal duration. The one is that which in an especial manner he termeth his. In the gradual desuetude of an old observance, this custom of solemnizing our proper birthday hath nearly passed away or is left to children, who reflect nothing at all about the matter, nor understand anything in it beyond cake and orange."

—Charles Lamb.

"On the day before my birthday," I heard a New Thought speaker say recently, "I spend the whole evening answering a set of about two hundred questions. I sit down and make a business of it. I write the answers down and compare them with the answers of previous years."

Why Didn't Someone Interrupt Him? It is hard to conceive of anyone with the leisure and the fixity of purpose to spend a whole evening in that admirable way. How was it that no one insisted on his making a fourth at bridge or taking a spin in the machine? How came it that he was not beguiled from his resolution by the lure of a fresh uncut magazine upon his library table?

Surely he cannot be married, else his wife would have reminded him that he had promised to go to the moving-pictures with her.

Knowing that the difficulty of living on twenty-four hours a day is almost as great a problem as the high cost of living, I wouldn't dare ask my readers to devote a whole evening to such a task, or to answer two hundred questions.

A Little Stock-Taking, Now And Then. But if, instead of making our birthdays merely a matter of "cake and orange" (or their modern equivalent, birthday gifts), we did manage to find an hour sometime during the day in which to do a little stock-taking, would it do us any harm?

When we go to town with a ten-dollar bill and come back with ten cents; we usually sit down and reckon on what has become of the money. Shall we do less when we have spent a year?

Some Of The Questions We Might Ask. Have I grown mentally in the past year?

Have I made any new friends? Have I kept all my old friends? Have I strengthened my character in any way?

Have I learned any lessons from my failures and mistakes? Have I gained any on my besetting fault?

How have I treated my body? Have I made it a more or a less efficient tool by my treatment of it in the past year?

How do I stand financially? Have I gone a little further toward shaping a worthy creed of action and belief for myself?

These are some of the questions that my own life suggests to me. Yours will suggest others to you.

To-day must be the birthday of some of my reader friends and I know they will give these suggestions some consideration because of the coincidence. But let them not be the only ones.

The business that went on indefinitely without a stock-taking would soon be in a muddle. Is the business of your life less important?

Death of Dr. Ebenezer Thompson.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—It is my purpose to use your columns, if you will please permit me, to mention an event of considerable importance to the people of St. John's. That event is the death of Dr. Ebenezer Thompson, at the ripe age of eighty-four years.

For about half a century Dr. Thompson practised medicine in this Bay and hundreds testify to his kindness and care on behalf of all who needed his assistance. Through rain and sunshine, calm and storm, he went by boat wherever and whenever he was wanted, and as his patients were scattered over a coast-line exceeding 100 miles, the calls were frequent and the journeys often long.

At last, however, the iron constitution of the old doctor gave up and he was forced to discontinue the work he had performed for so many years. Even on his sick bed, however, he gave what advice and assistance lay in his power.

But the old doctor's voice will be heard no more. He rests now in Hermitage churchyard by the old stone church, and under its shadow he will lie until the Last Great Day.

Now the old doctor has passed away it would be well if another took his place. From Burgeo to St. John's, nearly 200 miles, there is no medical man. About three or four thousand people therefore have little chance to see one. The only way to do so is by sending to Burgeo, Hr. Breton or St. Jacques. To do this one must pay a fee of $20 to $25 for each visit, and sometimes the doctor cannot leave his own practice on any condition. When he does probably the fee is inadequate, although it may seem big to the fisherman. One must remember, however, that the doctor is a busy man, and absence from his practice causes confusion and inconvenience. Calling doctors away from their practice should be unnecessary. There is a fine field of labour for a young or a middle-aged physician in this Bay.

The travelling is nearly all done by boat, but a great part of it is done where the water is generally smooth. Dr. Thompson managed it for half a century and conditions were far less favourable when he began. Very little, if any, travelling could be done by steamer then, and accommodation at its best was poor. Now the steamers are often available for reaching several settlements, accommodation is easily obtained, and motor boats are procurable.

I hope this will meet the eye of some zealous medical man, who for the sake of his work amongst the poor will not be daunted by a little hardship and self-sacrifice but will make up his mind to set to work in Hermitage Bay. If he is in earnest he will be well received and need not expect any insurmountable difficulties.

Yours very truly,
W. P. COURAGE,
The Parsonage, Hermitage,

All Children Love "Syrup of Figs" for Liver and Bowels

Give it when feverish, cross, bilious, for bad breath or sour stomach.

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative;" they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other, kind with contempt.

Spanish Cocoa a Rare Treat.

To know the finest method for making chocolate or cocoa one must learn of the practice in Spain or in one of the Spanish-American countries. There one finds out two important things. The first concerns the utensil in which the chocolate is made. Our nearest approach to this is an enameled ware double boiler. Indeed, this is a perfectly satisfactory substitute for the heavy and fragile chocolate pots favored by some of the Spanish-American countries. The second point is that chocolate is better if not served freshly made. Chocolate and cocoa are much improved if they are prepared some hours before service. Cook the chocolate in the enameled ware boiler very thoroughly. Set in a cool-place and let stand until required. Then heat to boiling point and serve either with or without whipped cream.

What About Medicated Wines?

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—Now that the time is drawing nigh for a vote of the electorate for or against Prohibition, I would draw the attention of the promoters of this agitation to the fact that in all districts outside of St. John's Prohibition or Local Option has been adopted, that is for the sale of intoxicating liquors, such as whiskey, wine, rum, gin, etc. But what about medicated wines. There is not one word as far as I can see about the latter although more people are ruined annually through the sale of those so-named medicines than from all other intoxicants. This medicated stuff is worse by far than the genuine article, for one is pure and, provided one has control over himself, there is no fear, but the other, if only a spoonful is taken, dulls the intellect, kills the nerves and destroys the individual mentally and physically who indulges only to a very small extent in its use. Now, then, gentlemen, be up and doing, for if all those medicated wines are not included in the Prohibition Act, then I say that it is only a farce.

Yours truly,
VOTER.

"Just the Same."

How often does your friend ask you "How are you feeling," and your answer is: "Just the same," my cough is not one bit better. Don't you think that you are very foolish in allowing this nasty cough and cold hang on to you for such a long time?

If you have contracted a cough or cold in some way or other, try the following:—Mix equal parts of Stafford's Liniment and Camphorated Oil together and apply to the neck and chest, rubbing it in well every time. Take from one to two teaspoonfuls of Stafford's Phorator Cough and Cold Cures every two hours.

The above treatment has been found beneficial hundreds of times. You can obtain these preparations from Obituary.

JOSEPH PERKS.

There passed away at the General Hospital at 8 o'clock this morning, Joseph Perks, son of the late Sergt. Henry Perks of the Constabulary. The deceased had been ailing for about three weeks past and was in his 27th year. He is survived by a widow and five children: mother, seven brothers, one of whom Mr. John Perks is linotype operator at the Evening Herald Office, and three sisters, to all of whom the Telegram extends sincere sympathy. The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon next from his late residence Gilmore Street.

One Pair of Hands is enough.

If you give your Cook a Gas Cooker she can always cook her best and need never keep you waiting because she has nothing else to do but cook.

She has no troublesome coal fire to look after, but can get the exact heat she wants for every dish by merely turning a tap—and she can cook several dishes (each requiring a different degree of heat) at the same time.

The Gas Cooker needs no preparation, makes no cleaning work, and is turned out as soon as it is finished with and therefore burns no unnecessary fuel.

By using a Gas Water-Heater in addition to the Gas Cooker hot water is supplied for all household purposes with the greatest promptitude, and the use of coal in the kitchen can be done away with altogether.

Where Gas Appliances are used in the kitchen the cook will always find that "one pair of hands is enough."
