The Western outfit took it down to the Varsity basket, but a goal was not forthcoming. W. Potter, by a nice bit of dribbling, took the ball down the side and with a pretty toss scored the first basket of the game. The only half of the Potter family got the ball on the jumpoff and took it down the middle floor and scored once again for Varsity. Western then took a new lease of life and McHaffle scored Western's first goal on a short pass from Hungerford. Hungerford then took the ball on the jumpoff and tied the score with a shot from under the basket.

London, Jan. 31.—Rugby scores today were as follows:

Up and scored.

Hutchinson tried holding hands with Olaf Johnson, and the result was that Johnson was given a free toss, and made good. The score now stood 20—17 for Varsity, and things were not looking so bad. Varsity took time out when somebody planted Burgess in the eye. Currle, Toronto, broke into the scoring column with a two-pointer tossed from near the foul line. Hutchinson, the elongated Varsity center, slid one through the rim from the side of the court, and added another two points to the total against Western. C. Potter ended the scoring for the night when he got a dog shot. The final score stox.

Few Jems.

The death of Jem Driscoll cuts another connection with the days when British fighters were supreme in almost every division. He first made his appearance on this side in 1908. He outpointed Abe Attell in a 10 round bout. The clever Jewish boy had the better of only two rounds. He met all the best and won. Pal Moore defeated him on points in 1910 and the same year, Freddie Walsh, a compatriot from whom Benny Leonard took the lightweight championship, won on a foul. fought Owen Moran, also a Welshman, a 20 round draw in 1913. In 1914 he was the first among British boxers to join up. He gave up a lucrative bookmaking business to enlist in the Welsh Fusiliers. Leach Cross fought ten rounds once with Driscoll, and by actual count he only laid gloves on the clever Welshman twice during the whole fight.

Anglers Back.

Muskegon is apparently quite sincere in its desire to give the Min-League another trial. The stipulation is that the clubs stick to the salary limit. Muskegon makes it almost necessary to include some other Western city to break the long jump, and means that Kitchener or Brantford will not be included. This will not be a hard blow to either city for this year at least. An all-Canadian circuit is coming sooner or later, in which these
