

NEWS OF VANCOUVER. QUATINSO WILL BOOM.

Artillery Companies Pass Creditable Inspection—Sneak Thieves—Mission to Yukon.

Westminster Politician to Agitate Against Railway Proposal—Electric Company's Concessions

(From Our Own Correspondent.) Vancouver, April 23.—There is a semi-official report to the effect that Col. Peters will report very favorably on the Vancouver militia, which he was engaged in inspecting to-day.

W. H. Gallagher has been nominated in the opposition interest in Lillooet. The body of an unknown man was found in a shack at Ebevine this morning. The man had evidently accidentally killed himself by falling on a sharp pointed stump in the shack. There is no evidence of foul play.

A man named Long was brought to the city hospital yesterday by the tug Eschewer from Higgins' logging camp, suffering from broken ribs and a badly shattered arm, as the result of an accident.

The Very Rev. Father Gendreau, O. M. I., Vicar General of the Yukon jurisdiction of the Roman Catholic church, is now in Vancouver en route North. Father Gendreau will sail for Wrangell from this city, accompanied by two clerical helpers, so soon as he learns that the Stikine navigation is open for the season, as he would gain no time by leaving earlier for the North. He will head the first Roman Catholic mission to the Yukon country.

Otto Nordenskjöld is now in Vancouver on a short visit, to his journey North, in quest of the missing balloonist, Andree, as well as in the interests of science.

A lady from Ashcroft complains that while attending an auction at sale rooms in this city she had her pockets picked of tickets to Ashcroft and a sum of money. There are a great many vagrants and sneak thieves in town.

The Vancouver Bicycle Club are applying to the District Coroner at this race meet here on July 2, the occasion of Vancouver's annual celebration.

There are not many changes in the wholesale prices of commodities. Hay, freely offered by the farmers, and the demand is not great here, though this commodity is going up in price in the States. Flour, oats and wheat have advanced.

The City Council is about to consider a request for a license, asked by the Van Anda Copper and Gold Mining Company towards the proposal of that company to erect and work a 100 ton smelter, which would require a sufficient encouragement, they would locate in or near Vancouver.

The City's proposed new agreement with the Electric Company provides, amongst other things, that the company shall place fenders on the cars and shall make the City, if at any time it shall be found necessary to call upon the company to substitute underground for overhead wires and connections of motor power.

RAILWAY MEETING. On one point there was absolute unanimity at the citizens' meeting last night, namely, that it is advisable, may almost necessary in the interests of the province, to build, as speedily as possible, the proposed Stikine-Teslin railroad. Mayor and his associates, however, were not in accord on this point, and the meeting, held on Monday evening, was adjourned to take up the matter, but he added, that, failing this, the people of the province must do it. The business of the meeting was adjourned to a consideration of the grant of a provincial subsidy to the government of the labor vote were strong for the building of the line in favor of a government subsidy. The resolutions were carried by 52 votes to 52, after Mr. Bartley, as representing the Trades and Labor Council, had moved the insertion of a clause, solutions, of clause declared the labor must not be employed in the construction and maintenance of the proposed railway.

MINISTER NOTES. Minister, April 23.—The new company was named yesterday and launched on the 15th inst. at New Westminster. The name given to it was Canco. The little daughter of Manager Schaeke performed the ceremony of naming.

Mrs. Mary Fisher, formerly Miss Mary London, of Westham Island, died yesterday morning of pneumonia at the early age of 23. She had recently arrived from her home in Ontario.

The Mayor of New Westminster is calling a citizens' meeting early next week to consider the Yukon railway subsidy question. It is expected that Postmaster Brown will lead the opposition to the government's proposal, but in this Mr. Kennedy's proposed substitute will, it seems, not receive much support from the local members of the board of trade, who favor government aid.

Col. Anderson, engineer of the marine department, has set for the North Coast a meeting for a new light at the mouth of the Fraser. He has gone to Wrangell on the Quadra, intending on the way to inspect the Coast and arrange for its proper buoying and lighting.

Two convicts from the penitentiary at New Westminster have been committed for trial on charges of attempting to break from prison.

The seventh anniversary services at the Victoria West Methodist church this week have resulted very satisfactorily, both in point of attendance and financially for the $100 which it was desired to add to the quarterly official board funds was raised. At the Sunday morning and evening, Mr. Kendall, pastor of Emmanuel Baptist church speaking at the afternoon meeting. At the public meeting on Monday evening addresses were made by Rev. T. W. Hall, Rev. T. Crosby and Rev. J. F. Betts.

A Clergyman's Thumping Heart. Cured After Years of Tedium but Fruitless Treatment—These are the Words of Rev. L. W. Showers, of Elderton, Pa. "My case was chronic. Had tremor, palpitation since I was a boy. As soon as Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart advertised, I procured a bottle and used it with the most perfect results. My heart is now strong and healthy and I feel as well as ever. I have been cured of my heart disease. This is a true story. If you are afflicted with heart disease, get a bottle of Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart. It will cure you. Sold by Hall & Co., and Dean & Hiscock.

Active Operations for the Development of the Coal Mines Now to be Initiated.

Steamer Ningchow Brings Latest News of the Golden North—Waterfront Gossip.

On her next coast trip the steamer Willapa will carry up to Quatsino at the northern end of the island, some very valuable mining machinery consigned to the West Vancouver Coal Co., of San Francisco. The shipment of the machinery will make the first practical steps taken towards the development of the immense coal deposits there, and will also contribute materially to the prosperity of the West Coast of Vancouver Island. The machinery that has already arrived consists in the main of a very large boiler, so big that it is considered doubtful whether the Willapa will have room for it on deck. The steamer only returned from the Coast on Sunday, having spoken no news and heard of no new happenings. Mr. Nicholson, Tacoma, who accompanied Mr. Wingate on his late trip to Clayoquot, was among those returning, as were also Mr. Granger, a Vancouver mining man, and Mr. Childs, of Alberni.

THE SOUND SERVICE. The "old reliable" City of Kingston did not come over from the Sound yesterday morning nor will she come today. As previously announced she has been laid off for an overhauling at Tacoma, and the City of Seattle will cover her work while making the outward run this morning. As she proceeds to Alaska from here, the Ewangel will be called upon to service this evening to handle the mails and passengers going to the Sound.

MERCHANTMEN ARRIVE. Two deep sea arrivals in Esquimalt on Sunday were the ship J. B. Brown and London Hill, the latter being the vessel spoken of by the Cape by the Warrimoo on Friday. The two vessels were brought in by the American tug "Eye" and Wanderer. The London Hill comes from San Francisco and is here for orders; the Brown is from Acapulco and is bound for the American port of Seattle. She first will be hauled on the Esquimalt marine ways for repairs.

TURPLE'S BUSY SHIPYARD. The steamer Ewangel was launched from Turple's yard on Sunday evening, where she had been receiving repairs to her keel, damaged by contact with a rock at Port Angeles.

Last evening the Vancouver steamer Caplano was taken on the ways and will be generally overhauled, painted and repaired.

FOR THE SCENE OF SERVICE. Frank M. York will leave for the North about May 1 with the steamer steamer Victoria. The other steamer for the Maitland-Kersey company will leave next week later. The Monte Cristo, the company's other vessel, is on the ways at Wrangell, being overhauled preparatory to the rush up the river.

THE CASE OF THE "OZAR." Still another technical case has been raised in the case of Dunsmead vs. the Klondike and Columbia Gold Fields Co. for the possession of the tug Ozar, which the plaintiffs claim was sold to the defendants by Mr. C. J. V. Spratt, despite a charter which they, the plaintiffs, had on the tug. The Supreme court granted the plaintiffs an injunction giving them possession of the vessel. This was used by the Full court and yesterday two applications were made before Mr. Justice Drake. One was by the plaintiffs for continuation of the injunction and the other by the defendants for a dissolution of it. Mr. Justice Drake, however, refused the objection that the Supreme court did not have jurisdiction, that the action for the possession of a vessel was a matter for the Admiralty court. The question was argued at some length, decision being reserved.

PREPARING TO FISH. Fishing preparations on the Skeena are being made with the little station along the Skeena a very busy place at present. According to news brought from the North yesterday the indications for a big run of salmon on the river are very favorable and the preparations now advancing are made in expectation of the opening of the fishing season by June 15. Other than this news the Louise, which arrived on Sunday, had little to report. The Louise brought down Rev. Jennings, Rev. Mr. Robson and Rev. Mr. Nevel for the purpose of attending the Methodist conference shortly to be held. Among other passengers were Mr. Robson, Mr. Ashdown Green, Mr. C. W. D. Gilford, and Mr. Clayton.

MARINE NOTES. A Honolulu man writing home from San Francisco advises his government to look out for the schooner "The Trade." He states that this craft is loaded with dope and is bound for the neighborhood of Honolulu, that Captain C. A. Moore owns the schooner and is aboard, and that the opium is the property of a British Columbia and San Francisco syndicate. The Free Trade sailed from San Francisco on April 1, and should reach the islands in the course of a few weeks from that date if in that direction she is bound. From other sources it is stated, however, that the schooner's destination is the Alaskan islands, where Moore is supposed to know of some valuable gold deposits.

The Centennial's sailing for the North has been postponed until this evening. She will go up fairly light.

READS LIKE ROMANCE. A Robbery Syndicate Whose Prospective Booty is All the Treasure of Dawson. By the arrival of the steamer Ningchow from the North on Sunday last, was received of the existence of a sworn band of robbers on the lower waters of the Yukon, whose leaders contemplate—if the surprising story be true—the most gigantic robbery in the history of America. The report, which although it reads very like a fairy tale is beyond the limit of possibility, is based on the word of an Alaskan pioneer named Dick Chamberlain, who for some time past has been a resident of Circle City, and who claims to be himself a member of the pirate band, having joined on compulsion with his life as the price of refusal, he having however no heart in the grim enterprise.

In brief the story goes that this company of lawless men, composed of two hundred and more of the most desperate thieves, gamblers and thugs in the Northern country, men for the most part who have been driven out of Dawson and the minor camps, contemplate a sudden descent upon the commercial companies' stores at Dawson, the blowing of their stores as well as that of the government commissioner and the strong box of the newly established bank.

and the catching of the spoils at a point four miles below the city until the proceeds of the gigantic steal can be run the river on an appropriated steamer. Chamberlain, who is said to be a man with a clean record in the North, declared that he had been an occupant of a winter cabin just above Circle City, and that which was a large log shack occupied by the toughest gang in all the neighborhood, and directed apparently by a relative of the notorious Kid Hirsch, who had been elected "captain." Chamberlain paid little or no attention to his neighbors at first, but finally had his suspicions aroused and commenced to give attention to their nocturnal actions at about the same time that he became suspicious of him. He had as soon as he realized the position of affairs that he had been made a party to, and put the authorities on their guard, when he was seized while making preparations for departure, and at the muzzle of revolvers sworn into the band against the wishes of the leader and seven members who voted for his death.

Subsequently he was informed as a member of the organization that the band was to make a concerted night attack upon Dawson in which the population was absent from the town on 40 different numerous stampedes to new diggings—simultaneously blow the safe and working in divisions, and hurry to the place to get the booty before the Dawson men could awake to the fact of the position of affairs. On the argument of Chamberlain finally prevailed on the gang to send him ahead to Dawson to make his way out and put the authorities on their guard, when he was seized while making preparations for departure, and at the muzzle of revolvers sworn into the band against the wishes of the leader and seven members who voted for his death.

When a baby comes to the house real happiness comes. The care and anxiety of the mother, the little hands and the little voice. The highest function given to a young mother is to bring healthy, happy children into the world. Dr. Pierce's Great Peppermint Cure is the best medicine for the purpose. It is a simple, safe, and effective remedy for all the ailments of children. It is a true and reliable medicine, and it is the best medicine for the purpose. It is a simple, safe, and effective remedy for all the ailments of children. It is a true and reliable medicine, and it is the best medicine for the purpose.

THE COMING OF BABY. When a baby comes to the house real happiness comes. The care and anxiety of the mother, the little hands and the little voice. The highest function given to a young mother is to bring healthy, happy children into the world. Dr. Pierce's Great Peppermint Cure is the best medicine for the purpose. It is a simple, safe, and effective remedy for all the ailments of children. It is a true and reliable medicine, and it is the best medicine for the purpose.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

HIS HEART WAS HEAVY. An Apologetic Jap Whose Conscience Troubles Him. Mr. Norman Hardie, the local agent of the Northern Pacific Steamship Co., is not a missionary, but he sometimes displays that spirit of truth and candor which brings repentance to the sinner. A few days ago a well-dressed Japanese gentleman, who called on him, and handed him another Jap's transport applied for passage to San Francisco. With a keen perception Mr. Hardie discovered that the man was dishonest in purpose, and after putting him through a series of catching questions, he told him that he was not to be taken on another Jap's transport applied for passage to San Francisco. With a keen perception Mr. Hardie discovered that the man was dishonest in purpose, and after putting him through a series of catching questions, he told him that he was not to be taken on another Jap's transport applied for passage to San Francisco.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

BENEFIT OF THE DOUBT. Parker, the Suspected Pickpocket, Discharged—Other Court Cases.

Charles Parker, the suspected pickpocket, was given the benefit of a doubt in the police court yesterday, and the charge against him dismissed. All the witnesses were sure that Parker had taken a purse from Mrs. Gold's pocket, but none could say that they saw the purse in his hands. Parker, his voice choked with sobs, pleaded his innocence.

The police have located George Donaldson, who with Leon Marston, is wanted to answer to a charge of cruelty to a pony. Their case is to have been heard to-day, but was adjourned until Friday. The two boys took the pony from a lot, made a bit of a piece of wire, tied the pony to the horse, and rode the poor beast until it was near dead.

Two Chinamen were fined $7 each for cutting wood on the street during prohibited hours, and a couple of other minor cases completed the docket.

THE COMING OF BABY. When a baby comes to the house real happiness comes. The care and anxiety of the mother, the little hands and the little voice. The highest function given to a young mother is to bring healthy, happy children into the world. Dr. Pierce's Great Peppermint Cure is the best medicine for the purpose. It is a simple, safe, and effective remedy for all the ailments of children. It is a true and reliable medicine, and it is the best medicine for the purpose.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home in Tokyo. Perceiving that his neighbors were not entirely cured they donated their best winter garments, each took in hand a pair of mittens, and so on. The man Ito, however, did not do this. He had a mirror, and he used it. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured. He used it to look at his face, and he found that he was cured.

THE MICHIGAN MIRROR. Strange Worship in Japan and Its Astonishing Results. The Mainichi, a Japanese vernacular paper, has a peculiarly Japanese story in regard to one of the many religions which the inhabitants of the Chrysanthemum land affect. It seems that one of these religions is the Outake or worship of the Sacred Mountain, Mt. Fuji. It is a holy polished-metal mirror supposed to have marvellous curative powers and it is apparently worshipped as a kind of god. A young man named Ito, who had been discharged from an insane asylum as cured and returned to his home