WEDNESDAY, APRIL 20th, 1898. -The United States House of Representa tives and the Senate have argued the President's message, and while at one time there appeared to be a divergence of opinion, sufficent to give rise to a protracted debate, yet the two houses have, with but little waste of time, concurred in a resolution that leaves no doubt of the intentions of the United

-The London Punch, in a recent cartoon, aptly illustrated one secret of Great Britain's Far East. John Bull is represented as the owner of a coal dock with an abundant supply of that fuel on hand, while the warships of Russia, Germany and France are anchored outside with smokelers for carrying the mails. The Railway furnishes the car. permission to be allowed to coal up. The plies largely from Great Britain, their own product being totally inadequate to meet the ordinary demands. —There are signs that the Dominion parliament will be prorogued before the close of the month. Much important business has been transacted during the session and the Canadian people have been treated to some spirited debates between the government and opposition members. The Yukon railroad bill, preferential trade, and the budget have furnished excellent subjects for the speech makers, and we are inclined to believe that the Canadian parliament contains as many oratorical statesmen as any governing body, of like proportions, in existence; and Canada is proud of them.

In fact, the Bowker Company's uninterrupted success is due as much to its determination to give the utmost value for the money, as to the able management of the business by President Bowker and Treasurer Coe. The Bowker name appears upon every brand it puts out, and this brand alone has come to be recognized as a guarantee of quality. From humble beginnings, Mr. Bowker has built up one of the largest fertilizer concerns in the world, with a capital of $1,000,000, and the concern is in stronger shape to day and doing a larger business than ever.
