OFFICIAL MESSAGE BLASTS ALL HOPE OF BOY'S SAFETY

Says That Lance-Corp. C. R. Belcher Was Killed In Action.

Official confirmation of the death in action of Lance-Corporal Cecil Russel Belcher today crushed hopes of his be-ing alive which had been aroused when press casualty lists reported him wounded and not dead. wounded and not dead.

An official telegram last week brought the first news of the young solder which had been received since he was reported missing after the batte of Vimy Ridge. It reported him to have been killed. On Monday the press casualty lists reported "Lance-Corporal C. R. Belcher-wounded" and it was this that first aroused hope that the report of his death was a mistake.

The Advertiser immediately telegraphed the Director of Records at Ottawa and received the following reply: "Latest report received states Lance-Corporal Cecil Russel Belcher, previously wounded and missing, now offi-cially reported killed in action, April 5, 1917."

MAJESTIC.
Enid Bennett, star of "The Girl Glory" and "Little Brother," appears as French girl, the daughter of a Brittany fisherman in "The Mother nstinct," at the Majestic today. Instinct," at the Majestic today.

The opening scenes show the picturesque settings and life in the quaint little village where the men and women toil hard to earn a living from the sea. Eleanor Coutierre, the character portrayed by the star, is a singularly beautiful girl, and her mother is determined that this youthful beauty shall not be permanently blighted by the rough labor required of a fisherman's life. So Eleanor is sent to the home of an aunt in Paris. In the gayety of the Latin quarter, to which she is introduced by friends, all the vivacious charms of her nature is developed.

charms of her nature is developed.

The scenes of revelry in the artists' studios are of the typically French sort. Eleanor finds in them a realization of dreamed delights. Yet she preserves the sweet naivete and purity that caused an artist to call her "a flower blown up by the sea."

Her sister Marie spends the winter in Paris and in the spring Mather Court in Paris, and in the spring Mother Cou-tierre leaves the coast village to join her daughters. About the same time Marie starts for home. Mme. Coutierre upon arrival is dumfounded to learn that Eleanor has become a mother and is innocently proud of the nameless habe.
