Positive vs. Negative. The positive side of a battery is that from which current flows to the external circuit. Negative is the return circuit to the battery. This applies only in direct current.

An amplifier in a device which builds up or magnifies the waves or sounds in a radio receiving set. It generally consists of a "hard" tube, one with or as near total vacuum as possible.

Fake Inspectors.

Keep your eyes open for the bogus radio inspector wearing a special officer's badge. The fake inspector, after going over the wiring of the radio apparatus, upon which he invariably places his approval, collects a fee of from $1 to $5.

Direction of Antenna. An outdoor aerial does not neces An outdoor aerial does not necessarily have to run in any particular direction to pick up a certain station. The direction of the antenna means nothing at all in reception. Run the line the way that gives the most "open view," unobstructed by houses, etc.

A small brush should be a part of the equipment of all receiving sets. Keep the dust from collecting between the terminals, contact points, on the plates of the variable condensers and in corners of the cabinet. Dust the set each day. Radio instruments are delicate, and require care and attention similar to a watch if they are to function with efficiency.

Headsets for Clear Receiving.

Headsets for Clear Receiving.

In a radio headset each receiver should be carefully matched in tone.

So both will emit vibrations of the same nature. The receivers must be "soundmates" if the message is to be clearly understood. This is especially important for distance reception. Matched tone headsets have been found to increase greatly the range of radio receiving sets, as they produce exactly the same tone at each ear. The human ear is more sensitive to vibration of sympathetic nature.

Never place the lead-in tube so that the rain or snow can fall directly into it. This will cause leakage.

A single wire antenna is just as good, and in many cases a little better, than a four-wire antenna or a cage antenna. It has been suggested that the President of the United States set aside 10 minutes each day for a personal radio talk with the American people.

The cost of installing a first-class broadcasting station in the United States is about $50,000.
