A Short Story Worth Reading.

THE BLACK VEIL.

From Dicken's "Sketches by Boz."

One winter's evening, towards the close of the year 1800, or within a year or two of that time, a young medical practitioner, recently established in business, was seated by a cheerful fire in his little parlor listening to the wind, which was beating the rain in pattering drops against the window or rumbling dismally in the chimney. Suddenly the door opened and some one was ushered into the room.

It was a singularly tall woman, dressed in deep mourning, and standing so close to the door that her face almost touched the glass. The upper part of her figure was carefully muffled in a black shawl, as if for the purpose of concealment, and her face was shrouded by a thick black veil.

"It is not for myself, or on my own behalf," began the stranger, "that I come to you. If I labored under bodily disease I should not be out alone at such an hour or on such a night as this; and if I were afflicted with it twenty-four hours hence God knows how gladly I would lie down and pray to die. It is for another that I beseech your aid, sir, I may be mad to ask it for him—I think I am; but, night after night, through the long dreary hours of watching and weeping, the thought has been ever present to my mind; and though even I see the hopelessness of human assistance availing him, the bare thought of laying him in his grave without it makes my blood run cold!" And a shudder such as the surgeon well knew art could not produce trembled through the speaker's frame.

There was a desperate earnestness in this woman's manner that went to the young man's heart.

"If," he said, rising hastily, "the person of whom you speak be in so hopeless a condition as you describe, not a moment is to be lost. I will go with you instantly. Why did you not obtain medical advice before?"

"Because it would have been useless before—because it is useless now, even now," replied the woman, clasping her hands passionately.

"At what hour can he be seen?"

"Nine," replied the stranger.

"You must excuse my expressing these inquiries," said the surgeon. "But is he in your charge now?"

"He is not," was the rejoinder.

"Then if I give you instructions for his treatment through the night you could not assist him?"

The woman wept bitterly, as she replied, "I could not."

Finding that there was but little prospect of obtaining more information by prolonging the interview, and anxious to spare the woman's feelings, which, subdued at first by a violent effort, were now irrepressible and most painful to witness, the surgeon repeated his promise of calling in the morning at the appointed hour. His visitor, after giving him a direction to an obscure part of Walworth, left the house in the same mysterious manner in which she had entered it.

After plodding wearily through the mud and mire, making many inquiries for the place to which he had been directed, and receiving as many contradictory and unsatisfactory replies in return, the young man at length arrived before the house which had been pointed out to him as the object of his destination.

The door-chain was softly unfastened, the door opened, and a tall, ill-favored man, with thick black hair and a face, as the surgeon often declared afterwards, as pale and haggard as the countenance of any dead man he ever saw, presented himself.

"Walk in, sir," he said in a low tone.

The surgeon did so, and the man having secured the door again by the chain, led the way to a small back parlor at the extremity of the passage.

"Am I in time?"

"Too soon," replied the man. The surgeon turned hastily round, with a gesture of astonishment not unmixed with alarm, which he found it impossible to repress.

"If you'll step in here, sir," said the man, who had evidently noticed the action—"if you'll step in here, sir, you won't be detained five minutes, I assure you."

Five minutes had elapsed, and the surgeon had resolved to explore the house, in search of some one to whom he might make his errand known, when the room door opened and his last night's visitor, dressed in exactly the same manner, with the veil lowered as before, motioned to him to advance.

The woman led the way upstairs to the front room, and paused at the door, to let him enter first. It was scantly furnished with an old deal box, a few chairs and a tent bedstead, without hangings or crossrails, which was covered with a patchwork counterpane. The dim light admitted through the curtain rendered the objects in the room so indistinct, and communicated to all of them so uniform a hue, that he did not at first perceive the object on which his eyes at once rested, when the woman rushed frantically past him, and flung herself on her knees by the bedside.

Stretched upon the bed, closely enveloped in a linen wrapper and covered with blankets, lay a human form, stiff and motionless. The head and face, which were those of a man, were uncovered, save by a bandage which passed over the head and under the chin. The eyes were closed. The left arm lay heavily across the bed and the woman held the passive hand.

The surgeon gently pushed the woman aside and took the hand in his.

"My God!" he exclaimed, letting it fall involuntarily, "the man is dead!"

The woman started to her feet and beat her hands together. "Oh, don't say so, sir," she exclaimed, with a burst of passion, amounting almost to frenzy. "Oh, don't say so, sir! I can't bear it! Men have been brought to life before when unskilled people have given them up for lost, and men have died who might have been restored if proper means had been resorted to. Don't let him lie here, sir, without one effort to save him."

"It is of no use, my good woman," said the surgeon, soothingly, as he withdrew his hand from the man's breast. "Stay—withdraw that curtain."

"Why?" said the woman starting up.

"Undraw that curtain!" repeated the surgeon in an agitated tone.

"I darkened the room on purpose," said the woman throwing herself before him as she rose to undraw it. "Oh! sir, have pity on me! If it can be of no use, and he is really dead, do not expose that form to other eyes than mine!"

"This man died no natural or easy death," said the surgeon. "I must see the body." With a motion so sudden that the woman hardly knew that he had slipped from beside her, he tore open the curtain, admitted the full light of day, and returned to the bedside.

"There has been violence here," he said.

"There has!" replied the woman. "This man has been murdered."

"That I call God to witness he has!" said the woman passionately; "pitilessly, inhumanly murdered!"

"By whom?" said the surgeon, seizing the woman by the arm.

"Look at the butchers' marks and then ask me!" she replied.

The surgeon turned his face towards the bed and bent over the body, which now lay full in the light of the window. The throat was swollen and a livid mark encircled it. The truth flashed suddenly upon him.

"This is one of the men who were hanged this morning!" he exclaimed, turning away with a shudder.

"It is," replied the women, with a cold unmeaning stare.

"Who was he?" inquired the surgeon.

"My son," rejoined the woman, and fell senseless at his feet.

It was true. A companion, equally guilty with himself, had been acquitted for want of evidence, and this man had been left for death and executed. To recount the circumstances of the case at this distant period must be unnecessary, and might give pain to some persons still alive. The history was an every day one. The mother was a widow, without friends or money, and had denied herself necessaries to bestow them on her orphan boy. That boy, unmindful of her prayers, and forgetful of the sufferings she had endured for him—incessant anxiety of mind and voluntary starvation of body—had plunged into a career of dissipation and crime. And this was the result; his own death by the hangman's hands and his mother's shame and incurable insanity.

That hacking, persistent, distressing cough can be quickly cured by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

General News and Notes.

Every man describes cowardice in his own case as discretion.

Some sallow and leaden-hued complexions soon give place to the loveliest pink-and-white, when the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla is persisted in, and cosmetics entirely abandoned. Nothing can counterfeit the rosy glow of perfect health, which blesses those who use this medicine.

A woman might as well propose; her husband never admits after marriage that he was the one who did it.

RHEUMATISM CURED IN A DAY.—South American Rheumatic Cure for Rheumatism and Neuralgia radically cure in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause, and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits. 75 cents. Warranted by J. Pallen & Son.

The girls of sixteen who consider themselves young ladies should not snub the ugly looking boys of the same age. When the girls are twenty-two and a trifle shelf-worn the boys will be young men and may remember the snubs. It pays to be polite all the time.

Think for Yourself.

DON'T you think a medicine which cures others will cure you? Don't you think you need Burdock Blood Bitters to help you to health and happiness? We know B. B. B. cures dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation, headache and bad blood. Don't you think it is time you tried it?

Every man expects in his own case to have ample time to get his worldly affairs in good shape before he dies, but no man ever has. Men hope to leave enough to keep their wives, but they leave it in such shape that the women lose half the threads in trying to get affairs untangled.

A Consideration.

GENTLEMEN,—My brother suffered from summer complaint and was extremely weak. We tried many remedies but without effect. At last my aunt advised us to try Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and before he had taken one bottle he was cured. We consider it saved his life.

MISS ADELAIDE CRITTENDEN, Baldwin, Ont.

Ayer's Pills

May always be relied upon as a certain cure for liver troubles, constipation, sick headache, biliousness, dyspepsia, jaundice, and rheumatism. Unlike most cathartics, Ayer's Pills strengthen the stomach, liver, and bowels, and restore to these organs their normal and regular action. Taken in season, they check the progress of colds, fevers, and malaria. Being purely vegetable and sugar-coated, Ayer's Pills are

I know of no better remedy for liver troubles and dyspepsia."—James Quinn, Hartford, Ct.

Capt. Chas. Mueller, of the steamship "Felicia," says: "For several years I have relied more upon Ayer's Pills than anything else in the medicine chest, to regulate my bowels, and those of the ship's crew. These Pills are not severe in their action, but do their work thoroughly. I have used them, and with good effect, for the cure of rheumatism, kidney troubles, and dyspepsia."
