The New York Albion on the Harper's Ferry

 While wo endeavor to keep our ren erp acquaiuted with the current of events in the United States, and with the principal turns and vicissitudes in the con in their politics, we rarely intermeddle press an opinion, fayorable or as to ex able of the principlos fareore or unfavo of the numerons section duct of an their politicians are divide into whic their politicians are divided. Andwe now depart from this rule it is on? we now depart from this rule it is onl because a contemporary which in fossed, and very generally preserved, similar neutrality, has led the way an article which has caused us bot surprise and pain. We sped us bot New York Albion and its article in issuo of the 22 d ult. upon the H in th Ferry insurrection.
We can very well understand wh course of geperal heutralits in itse to the internal polities of a country which it represents the interesta of in other state ; and we can understand too, how it might occasionally bo tempt induced to expross that courso, and frecdom an opinion upon an impor political cecurrence. But wo cannctun derstand why, when it does speak, i should evince the spirit which is so ap parent in the artiole to which is so apalluded.
Of all men in the world the Briton is he who should feel most keenly and apeak most freely upon the subject of orable injustice of slares keenly the mis with that happy state of freedom which is ris noblest and proudest privilege; and he should speak most freely thet which he feels, inasmuch as Heaven having bestowed upon him a largcr the lot of incst of the sons of fllen having taught him iy experience its blessinge, he should above all other men raise his testimony in its behalf. When we hear of an Fnglishman carriol beyond the bounds of prudence in deannciation of slavery wo can ecarcely wonder; but we do marvel to sce one carried beyond the bounds of justice reprobation of a party whose justice in by legal means, to discourage, and eveutually extinguish, the blighting curse.
Mr. Gerrge Curtis may Mr. Gerrge Curtis may be "the mos popular of popular lecturers" but wi cansot see how his saying that "th
