Would Call Bald Mountain -:- Mount Champlain. -:-

Sir, We are all agreed that we should do all possible honor to the memory of Champlain and de Monts, and should take such steps as we can to keep their names in remembrance. There is one form of memorial more lasting than stone or brass, and that is a place-name, which, once fixed, does not disappear, but keeps a name perpetually in use and recollec-tion. The name of de Monts has become attached to a locality on the St. Croix river, and we naturally ask whether there Reach, rises a fine mountain, the highest in southwestern New Brunswick, com-monly called Bald Mountain. Now there are in New Brunswick over a dozen Bald

Mountains, and all who have given any ability of enriching our local homencia-ture with names appropriate to our his-tory, agree that these Bald Mountains should be re-named, or at least given al-ternative names. Here then is a striking have a new name, and we wish to honor Champlain in this way. Should we no agree to call that mountain henceforth Mount Champlain? The only way to secure its adoption is for all who approve river, and we naturally ask whether there is any prominent place near St. John to which Champlain's name might be attached. There is such a place wholly worthy of such a connection.
