LAUNCH OF THE LAH-NE-O-TAH

During the week that the house-boat was being built in Athens for Mr. Loverin, the work was inspected by hundreds of people, and many indeed were the criticisms passed upon the principles adopted in its construction. But the work was proceeded with rapidly, along well defined lines, and under the skillful direction and manipulation of Mr. Marc Arnold, assisted by Mr. Alex. Easton, a light and strong, well-braced superstructure was reared. The final touches of the painter's brush were applied last week and, on Saturday evening the launch was launched and opened to visitors. A large number, principally ladies, took advantage of the occasion to inspect the interior of the craft, and all expressed themselves as delighted with its snug, inviting appearance and convenient arrangement.

As the building neared completion and an idea could be formed of its weight, the problem of how to take it to the lake was regarded as a very difficult one. It was generally conjectured to be between three and four tons, and, of course, a capstan apparatus would move it, but this was regarded as too slow an operation. Wheels were suggested, but the rough road was unfavorable, and it was finally decided to leave it on the runners on which it was built and employ traction engines to draw it. Here the experience of Mr. Geo. Nash was utilized, and according to his plan the building was elevated and thoroughly supported on rollers. On Monday evening a capstan was used to draw it into position on Main street, and later the engine of Mr. Geo. Murray Bates arrived and made a trial trip with the craft up to Elgin street.

During Monday night the engine of Melvin Wing of Lyn reached Athens, and early on Tuesday morning the engines were hooked on and the launch was towed to the lake. Following the engines and boat came a team drawing two wagons loaded with wood, water, etc., and as the procession moved off it presented a strange spectacle. The management of the whole operation was entrusted to Mr. W. T. Hayes, and with Mr. Nash directing the "skidders," no avoidable accident caused delay.

At Wilts's corner a break in the draw-bar of the engine caused a halt of nearly an hour. Mr. John Morris arrived on the scene about the time the break occurred, and placing his milk-can on the side of the road, he very kindly and with commendable promptness rushed the broken parts back to Athens for repair.

In climbing the hill at Hefferman's, the Bates engine suffered the loss of a couple of cogs, but with this exception the trip was made without accident of any kind. Two of the best skidders on the team were Mr. J. A. Steacy and Mr. Ripley of Elgin and Len Ossitt of Brockville, who deserted the salmon fishing at Charleston to go to the aid of the Scribe, and their gratuitous services were highly appreciated.

On arriving at the lake, the launching of the craft presented a new difficulty, and considerable engineering skill was exercised in overcoming it. After many schemes had been proposed and rejected, a number of timbers were laid parallel to the line of direction being pursued, reaching from the boat to the water's edge, and on these a number of poles were placed. The engines having been set off, a team was hitched to each, and to one side, the gang swung on levers, lifted on handspikes, and exerted whatever other powers of propulsion that they could devise, and then the final work was done with a grating sound, the Lah-ne-o-tah parted the waters of Charleston, and the beautiful, and serene element for which she was designed.

After pulling out the runners, the boat was taken over to Cedar Park wharf and snubbed up for the night. To-day the masts are being stepped, sail-tacking adjusted, interior furnishings placed in position, and by the end of the week it is expected some of the Lah-ne-o-tah will be ready for occupancy.

The dictionary of six or seven cheese in an old potato pit on Mr. Brown's farm one day last week, says the Dominion correspondent of the Prescott Journal, has caused a mild sensation here. Several theories have been advanced as to how or why they came to be there, but as yet the mystery hasn't been solved. The general opinion is that some cheese was left in the surrounding factories has had a batch of spoiled cheese and disposed of them surreptitiously, but this is mere conjecture. No particular person can or should be accused, for there is no proof to be had. The loss of the cheese may have been made up to the patrons. No one knows for a certainty how long the cheese may have been in the ground, and it is just possible that they may have been there several years.

Many spills would be avoided if but little care were taken to turn to the left when passing a wheel going in the same direction, and to the right when going in opposite directions. Dora England, aged 22, a resident of Newark, N. J., was tired of life and took a dose of Paris Green. Her mother discovered her act and being a disciple of the faith, she immediately administered to her daughter's recovery while the poison got in its deadly work, and the young girl died in great agony. Had a doctor been immediately sent for her life would have been saved.

A matched game of base-ball was played last between Athenian young men and maidens, but it failed to materialize. Probably the young men defaulted through fear of the round-arm curve of their fair opponents. When a lady throws a ball, the point of impact behind the thrower, and other points of danger must be calculated from this position. The mental arithmetic strain that some chess-players feel in the surrounding factories has had a batch of spoiled cheese and disposed of them surreptitiously, but this is mere conjecture. No particular person can or should be accused, for there is no proof to be had. The loss of the cheese may have been made up to the patrons. No one knows for a certainty how long the cheese may have been in the ground, and it is just possible that they may have been there several years.
