

CHAPTER VIII.		PAGE
The Storm—Arrival at the Indian Village—The old Chief's Wife—Some Kindness shown me—Attend a Feast, . . .	72
CHAPTER IX.
Preparations for Battle—An Indian Village on the Move—Scalp Dance—A Horrible Scene of Savage Exultation—Compelled to join the Orgies—A Cause of Indian Hostility—Another Battle with the White Troops—Burial of an Indian Boy—A Hasty Retreat—Made to act as Surgeon of the Wounded—Mauve Terre, or Bad Lands, . . .	92
CHAPTER X.
Mourning for the Slain—Threatened with Death at the Fiery Stake—Saved by a Speech from Ottawa—Starving Condition of the Indians, . . .	106
CHAPTER XI.
Meet another White Female Captive—Sad Story of Mary Boyeau—A Child Roasted, and its Brains Dashed out—Murder of Mrs. Fletcher—Five Children Slaughtered—Fate of their Mother, . . .	112
CHAPTER XII.
First Intimation of my Little Mary's Fate—Despair and Delirium—A Shower of Grasshoppers—A Feast and a Fight—An Enraged Squaw—The Chief Wounded, . . .	120
CHAPTER XIII.
Arrival of "Porcupine"—A Letter from Captain Marshall—Hopes of Rescue—Treachery of the Messenger—Egosegalonicha—The Tables Turned—Another Gleam of Hope—The Indian "White Tipi"—Disappointed—A White Man Bound and left to Starve—A Burial Incident, . . .	129
CHAPTER XIV.
Lost in the Indian Village—Black Bear's White Wife—A small Tea Party—The White Boy-captive, Charles Sylvester—The Sun Dance—A Conciliating Letter from General Sibley—A Puzzle of Human Bones—The Indian as an Artist—I Destroy a Picture and am Punished with Fire-brands—A Sick Indian, . . .	136	