their enemies. After they had made good cheer, the Algonquins, one of the three Nations, went out of their Cabins, and retired themselves apart into a private place, and caused all their women and girls to fit downe in rakes one by the other, and layd themselves behinds, thus singing all in one time, as I have laid before. And suddenly all the women and maidens began to cast off their Mantles of skin, and stripped themselves naked, shewing their puissante, and uerelie, as adorned with Masconis, which are paucetum and chasses anteclasses made of the hairs of the Porkspicks, which they dye of divers colours. After they had made an end of this song, they cried all with one voyce, ho, ho, ho; at the same instant all the women and maidens covered them selves with their Mantles, for they lye at their feet, and rest a space while; and then eftsoons beginning again to sing, they let fall their Mantles as they did before. They are out of one place when they dance, and make certaine gestures and motions of the body, lifting vp one foot and then another, stamping upon the ground. While they were dancing this dance, the Sagamo of the Algonquins, whose name was Befons, sat before the field and virginnes between two flames, whereon the heads of their enemies did hang. Sometimes he rose and made a speech, and said to the Mountaineers and Eskimos ye see how we rejoyce the victory which we haue obtained of our enimies, yet doth it like, that we may be victors; then they all together cried, ho, ho, ho. At once as hee was returned to his place, great Sagamo, and all his compaines cast off their Mantles, laying flatte naked, then
