

And, quiet still, the night des-
cends apace,
And, ling'ring round, usurps the
shadow's place
To kiss the lakelet there ;
The dew-drops dip to mingle
with her own ;
Though lip to lip, the night doth breath alone ;
Till morning stirs the air.