Pitied the Blind.

"I was standing in front of the Tutwiler waiting for a friend the other day," says a contributor to the Birmingham Age-Herald, "and just across the street a number of pretty girls were waiting for a street car. It was windy and there was quite a display of hestery. Now this in itself would not have been so very unusual, but a fellow standing by me spied the exhibition, and then saw a blind man sitting only about a hundred feet away, with a sign, 'Pity the Blind." I do not know who he was, but his sympathies were aroused, for he turned to me and said, 'I never was so sorry for a blind man in my life. I am going across and drep a quarter in his cap.' And he did." Pitied the Blind.

AN ANCIENT VINE. Curious Thing to Be Se

A great many curious and inter ing things may be seen both within and without the Royal Palace of Hampton Court, which stands on the banks of the Thames, a few miles from London. In fact, there are so many things that it would take too long to describe more than just a few of them. The oldest part of the palace was built by Cardinal Wolsey. who afterward gave it as a pr to Henry VIII., and a very splendid present it must have been. Since that time it has belonged to the Kings and Queens of England and a great many new buildings have been added to it. In the older part of the palace, over one of the great arched gateways, there is a very curious astronomical clock, made in the reign of Henry VII. The face of the clock, which is very large, is painted blue and gold and it gives a great deal more information than most clocks, for it not only tells what time it is, as other clocks do, but the day of the month, phases of the moon, the time of high water at London bridge, and several other things as well. to Henry VIII., and a very sp
