

ZEPPELIN

These Zeppelin raids at night must cease. Both Hulkson and myself find that our digestions are being impaired, and that on the morning after we have that kind of brackish sensation in the mouth which we have never thought for years, and which we never er thought to meet again once we had sterdied down in married life.

We are both special constables, and whenever a Zeprelin is seen anywhere near the British coast, the safety of Lerean demands that rulkson and I should be sent for by the nearest police station. We do not mind going to the station; we have never below been so familiar with the hospitable and cheery interior of these establishmen's Our grievances, in fact, are peculiar, and must be gone into in some detail. some detail.

Take my ewn first. I alone have a telephone, although Hulkson lives in the same block of flats. Consequently it is always I that am aroused .Generally I have been asleep about an hour and my wife not quite so long. She wakes first and seizes the telephone. Hearing the message, special constable emergency call, given with what you might call the fused telephone voice, she is surprised, hurried, a little cross and wakes no painfully.

I hustle irto clothes. London is afirdeadly gases are rolling down our street—my friends are withering—where is my truncheon?—can't i get some food?—are a few of the thoughts that stagger through my half-awakenthat stagger through my nan-awakened brain, and then I remember to call Hulkson. Of course, it is his wife who wakes first, and he gets a little un pleasantness, too, I hope. Then we rush to the station. We pass a real policement of two on the state. liceman or two on the way. Thus some are protected against the idea of a cold vigil and have overcoats and mufflers; others, swaved by the pro-valent notion of poison gases, are apparently relying almost entirely on the respirator—the rest of their costume is sketchy fiannels. All are bustume is skeeny manners. This appears ily consuming rumor. This appears to originate from the special telephone. "Fiave you hear!?" They've got it from Southend—whole place on got it from Southend—whose price on fire! Zepps now over Hounslow; now over the Crystal palace; now Victoria station! The Alexandra palace is burnt down. We're just off to Dept-ford!" These are a few of the observations that pass from mouth to mouth, increasing in quantity and importance as fresh arrivals provide fresh ground for impression.

Meanwhile; the officers appear very lusy, bustling through the crowd of us to their staff room and managing to look as though they knew everything that we are dying to find out. As a matter of fact, I once eaight an nonest commander, and he but no. there are consors about! MIGHTY MAUNA LOA.

This Gigantic Volcano is a Worthy

Rival to Vesuvius. The lofty volcanoes of the Hawaiian Islands, rising above the ocean from 5,000 to nearly 14,000 feet, are only the ummits of gigantic mountain masses summits of gigantic mountain masses that rise abruptly from the bottom of the Pacific. Mauna Loa, on the island of Hawaii, stands 13,675 feet above sea level, but its slopes descend beneath the sea, as shown by deep sea soundings, with a grade fully equal to if not greater than that of the visible slopes. The same is generally true of slopes. if not greater than that of the visible slopes. The same is generally true of the submarine slopes of other islands, and the depths attained by these continuous slopes, within thirty of fifty miles of the shores, vary from 14,000 to 19,000 feet. Mauna Loa and Mauna Ken if their trues hases are considered Kea, if their true bases are considered to be at the bottom of the Pacific, are to be at the bottom of the Pacific, are therefore mountains of as great an aititude as Mount Everest, or approximately 30,000 feet. In general the Hawaiian Island group consists of summins of a gigantic submarine mountain chain which projects only its loftier peaks an dmose above the water On the Island of Hawaii the volcanic forces are still in operation.

The one continuously active volcanic vent of the island is Kilauea, far down on the eastern flank of Mauna Loa—"the great mountain." No other volcano in the world approaches Mauno Loa in the vastness of its mass or in the magnitude of its eruptive activity. There are many volcanic peaks higher in the air, but most of them are planted upon elevated platforms, where they appear as mere cones of greater of less size. It is not yet known at level the base of Mauna Loa is situated, but it is below the sea, probably far below.

Mauna Kea-"the white mountain" is also a colossus among volcanoes Its summit, 13,895 feet, is a trifle higher than that a Mauna Loa, but its slopes are steeper, and its base is therefore much smaller. The magni-tude of Mauno Loa is due chiefly to the great area of its base, which is nearly elliptical in shape, with a major diameter of seventy-four miles and a minor diameter of fifty-three miles, measured at sea level.

In the aggregate of its cruptions Mauna Loa is also unrivaled. Some of the volcanoes of Iceland have been the volcanoes of Iceland have been known to disgorge at a single outbreak masses of lava fully equal to those of Mauno Loa. But such outbursts are infrequent in Iceland, and a century has elapsed since any of such magni-tude have occurred, though there have been several minor eruptions. The eruptions of Mauna Loa are all of great volume and occur irregularly, at an average interval of about eight years. In view of the total quantity years, in view of the total quantum of material it has disgorged during the last century no other valcano is at son should change his or her mind in the last century no other valcano and the last century no other valcano is at all comparable to it.—From a Bulletin of the United States Geological Sur-

Noyon, in France, held peculiar attractions for Robert Louis Stevenson because of its cathedral, where he heard the "Miserere" sung one sum-mer afternoon. Of the place itself he wrote: "It is but a stack of brown roofs at the lest, where, I believe, people live very reputably in a quiet way, but the shadow of the clurch falls upon it when the sun is low, and the five bells are heard in all quarters telling that the organ has begun. UNUSED R. R. TICKETS

A matter of importance to the public and the railways has been settled by the Government. A nice point has regard to the contemplated trip by train or boat. If the railways insisted upon the tax in such cases of changed intention, it was altogether likely that the public would set them down as extortioners. Accordingly the railways submitted the questions to the Government—what should be done in case unused tickets presented for refund to agent before the train starts; to agent or general office after train departs; the same or some following day; in the case of passenger tickets; in the case of sleeping car tickets; in the case of parlor car tickets; in the case of steamship tickets. The answer which the railways received was as follows: There can be no refund of the tax under any circumstances. Once the ticket is sold and the tax collected, it teket is soid and the tax collected, it is as though it were in the Dominion coffers and nothing but an act of Parliament can get it out again. It was explained by the Dominion authorities that in order to prevent the confusion that would arise in employer. confusion that would arise in applying literally the millions of tax stamps that would have been required on railway tickets, and the consequent difficulties that would have en-sued owing to delay in affixing and cancellation of stamps, the present method has been adopted, and, that as none of the public would have reason ably expected a refund on a stamp that had been affixed and cancelled. if ticket were refunded upon, so also no refund may be expected wherever a tax has been collected, and the ticket used and refunded upon. In other words, the act of purchase of the ticket in accordance with the Tax Act is a completed transaction so far as the collection is concerned, and under no circumstances as the law now stands could it be refunded. To make a refund of the tax possible a special would have to be passed by par-

Unnecessary Alarm. When Frederick the Great, at the beginning of the Seven Years' War, was in possession of Dresden, he went to view the works of art in the royal picture gallery. The gallery director, Reidel, took the king through all the rooms and explained each picture as they went along. Frederick express-ed his unreserved admiration for all the pictures, out when he came before a certain painting by Corregio stopped, viewing it with patricular interest.

"If you are willing," he said, suddenly, "I should like to have that picture" Reidel gasped, for he expected the king to say that he wished the picture for himself. But the king noticed his anxiety, and striking him on the cholder, said, laughing:

"If you are willing I should like to have that picture copied!"

Heated Bearings.

Sometimes when a bearing becomes heated and requires oil it will be found that the oil will not flow down in the oil hole. Either the hole is clogged with dirt or the heat may cause the air to rise and prevent the oil from entering. Where a wire cannot be used effectively the following remedy, although it is not infallible, is almost sure to make the oil reach the bearing.

Fill the hose with oil and quickly place the thumb over it to prevent the air from escaping, and if the oil cup does not leak the heated air inside will rise above the oil, and in two or three minutes it will be forced into the bearing, even if it has to pass considerable dirt.

When a bearing cannot be reached in this way, and when light oils, such as kerosene, are ineffective, try plac-ing a little money in the oil hole and allow it to remain a few minutes, then use oil.-World's Advance. Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper.

BAD EGGS AND STAGE.

Pelting Unpopular Performers is a Very Ancient Custom.

The practice of hurling bad eggs at actors who displeased them has been in vogue with audiences ever since there has been a stage and a dramatic production. Chinese, Greeks and Romans ran to this sort of unfragrant criticism, and two stories told by a collector of odd things connected with

That bullets neither whine, hiss, howl, hum nor whisper, novelists to the contrary notwithstanding, is information given by Edward C. Cross-man in Outing. With one possible ex-ception—when in certain conditions of open country modern military bullets hiss to those standing back of the firing line—nothing is audible except a sharp crash of air closing around the bullet's base when it travels at high speed. At a valority of 1500 for high speed. At a velocity of 1,590 feet a second or more, the noise is "like nothing so much as a long and very violently cracked blacksnake whip."
