VEGETARIANS IN THE SWIM. How They Came Out Ahead in the Recent Teronte Matches.

In a long distance swimming race the other day across Toronto bay from the Yonge street wharf to the swimming club, on the Island la-goon, there was fought a battle between vegetarians and meat eaters.
The course was about two miles in length, and Mr. H. F. Strickland, of length, and Mr. H. F. Strickland, of Toronto, a vegetarian, made the journey in the record time of fifty minutes. Mr. George H. Corson, another vegetarian, made the course in fifty-two minutes. Two Englishmen had come over to swim in the racesturdy beef-eaters from the land of roast beef-but they found the pace too fast and dropped out midway on the course. It was a handicap contest, but in actual time vegetarianism scored a decisive victory.

The race was not announced as a contest between vegetarians and contest between vegetarians and meat-eaters, but Messrs. Strickland and Corson resolved to give it that turn. They entered. Like others they trained. On the day of the race their sole diet was not between the contest of the contest trained. On the day of the race their sole diet was pea butter. All last week they reduced their ordinary vegetarian diet to simples, such as pea butter, peanuts, and raw fruit. Before setting out in the race they informed the astonished Englishmen, who were supposed to be the best who were supposed to be the best men in the contest, that they were vegetarians, had eaten no meat for years, and intended to prove the su-periority of their diet.

years, and intended to prove the superiority of their diet.

They did it. As they glided through the waves they were borne up by the consciousness that they were vindicating vegetarianism. To others it was a race for glory; to Messrs. Strickland and Corson it was an opportunity of showing a meat-fed world the error of its ways. They were men with a mission. A great cause relied on them, and inspired, fired by the knowledge, they slipped through the water with ease and made their meat-laden competitors look like stationary objects. A long swim is one of the severest physical tests to which a man can be put, and in order to settle conclusively the respective merits of pea butter and beef steak another race, specially arranged for the purpose, should be brought about, two men a side, over a two-mile course. It would draw a large crowd of butchers and market-gardeners to cheer their respective champions, says The Star.

The Farmer As He Really Is.

The Farmer As He Really 18.

To a class of dwellers in the city the word farmer suggests a rather unkempt looking man dressed in ill-fitting clothes, rather the worse for and staring about open-mouthfitting clothes, rather the worse for wear, and staring about open-mouthed, in a very comical fashion. This is the idea we see represented on the comic stage, and in the clown at the circus, and at which we are accustomed to laugh with a very self-satisfied idea of our own superiority. The idea is a very exaggerated one, as any can see by a visit to the market on a day when a fair representation of farmers is present.

As an instance take a farmer seen driving up one of the principal business streets of the city the other evening. He had apparently just disposed of a load of hay, as he was driving an empty hay rick. He was a man about thirty, well drassed in a blue serge suit, had on clean linen, wore a stiff felt hat, and in fact, had the appearance of a fairly prosperous city merchant, and would not have been taken for a man from have have been taken for a man from rural parts had he not been riding in a hay wagon. To complete the picture of prosperity he wore a very fine pair of gold-rimmed eye-glasses, and was smoking what we have ev-ery reason to believe was a good ci-gar. This is a picture of the farmer

A New York paper has the follow-ng: The Countess of Minto arrived ing: The Countess of Minto arrived on the steamer Lucania from Liverpool recently. Another passenger was the Right Rev. Cyprian Pinkham. During the voyage the Rev. Pinkham had been induced to relieve the monotony with an address. He spoke of the ultimate success which awaited the man who kept his eye on the future, the victory of the man or woman who did not revel in things done or regret pleasures left behind. In support of his statement he held up Lot's wife as an example of the futility and dire disaster which follow a desire to return to a wicked

Later in the day the Countess came to the rescue of Lot's unfortunate wife, and asked the reverend if Lot himself ought not to have been punished also, "for of necessity he, too, must have turned around, or how could he have learned the awful fate of his wife?"

"The man in this case was justified in turning around," said the clergyman, to the astonished Countess; "for is not a man compelled by law to look after his wife?"

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS. HE FEELS AS distoric Publishing House That Is About to Open a Branch in Canada—What

Now that the Oxford University Press is about to open a Canadian branch in Toronto, some particulars of this historic publishing house will be read with interest. It is the only be read with interest. It is the only press in the world that can produce a list of its productions for upwards of 300 years. It has shown continuous activity from the year 1.85, when one Joseph Barnes was appointed "Printer to the University," and granted £100 from the university chest. In 1586 Convocation elected delegates "to watch over the interests of the University and to control the Press," The output of the Press from 1486 to 1900 is estimated at 19,475 books, each separate edition, although it might consist of a million or more copies, being counted as a unit, and even this large total does not include two or three hundred issues of the Bibie and Paper Barner Benefit Press of 1800 press for the Bibie and Paper Barner Benefit Press from 1800 press from the Bibie and Paper Barner Benefit Press from 1800 press fr or three hundred issues of the Bibie

The first book printed at Oxfordwas the treaties of Tyrannius Runnaus on the Apostles' Creed, ascuthed to St. Jerome, and bearing the date, Iec. 17, MCCCCIXVIII, and concentrate the auction room. But it is generally believed nowadays that any the auction room. But it is generally believed nowadays that an X was omitted in the date, which should have been 1478. If the former figure were correct, Caxton could no longer be accorded the honor of having printed the first book in England (which, however, he nowhere claims), for it was not until 1477 that he set up his press at Westminster. In Henry VIII.'s reign Wolsey suppressed the Oxford Press, which was re-established during Elizabeth's sovereignty by the Eari of Leicester at his own cost

The printing was carried on first in hired premises at Oxford; then in the famous church of St. Mary the Virgin; next, from 1669 to 1719, in the Sheldonian Theatre; then at the Clarender Pressure of the St. Mary the sheldonian Theatre; then at the Clarender Pressure of the St. Mary the St. Clarendon Press near the theatre, until 1830; and since that date at the present fine and picturesque prem-It may be explained that the universities are entitled to the peruniversities are entitled to the per-petual copyright of books presented to them.
