Because the rose must fade, Shall I not love the rose Because the summer shade Passes when winter blows. Shall I not rest me there In the cool air ? .

Because the sunset sky Makes music in my soul, Oaly to fail and die. Shall I not take the whole Of beauty that it gives While yet it lives?

Because the sweet of youth Doth vanish all too soon, Shall I forget, forsooth,

To learn its lingering tune My joy to memorize In those young eyes?

If, like the summer flower That bleoms -a fragrant death. Keen music hath no power To live beyond its breath. Then of this flood of song

Let me drink long! Ah, yes, because the rose Fades like the sunset skies Because rude winter blows All bare, and music dies-Therefore, now is to me Eternity !

ave no respect for age or condition when she wants to show her capacity for 'taking off people. I once heard her mimicking a very dear old lady and she did not know that the old lady's niece was in the room. Another time I saw her 'take off' poor old Miss Lane, who is crippled and walks with such a particular gait. Do you think that the physical affliction of anyone should ever be mimicked?' 'I suppose not. Probably Lyra never thought anything about that. She likes to make people laugh over her eleverness, I don't think that she means to unkindness or the rudeness, and I know very nice people who will have nothing to do with Lyra because of the way she is always 'taking off' other people. She is very clever, I admit, but t is a dangerous kind of cleverness, and those who have this gift are almost sure to violate the Golden Rule and to sooner or later offend others when they allow themselves to give full rein

'Well, Huldah,' said Belle, 'I guess that you are right about that and, when I come to think of it, I can recall instances when Lyra gave down right offence by taking off ' others. I don't suppose that I would like it if I discovered her 'taking off' any of my relatives or myself. There is really a certain heartlessness and coarseness about it. As you say, Huldah, it is a dangerous gift.
